BRAIN PUNCTURED, MAN, 24, IS SAVED

ROYAL OAK, Mich., Sept. 24—Successful in its battle to save the life of Burton Hallard, 24, whose brain was punctured by a nut and bolt, medical science today fought to ward off possible blindness and deafness.

Hospital attendants today feared the Toronto, Ont., man may be deaf in one ear and blind in one eye, both on the side of his head which was penetrated by the metal in an auto accident.

The young man continued to show improvement from the delicate operation seven days ago, but he told physicians he couldn't hear or see on the injured side of his head. His speech, too, was affected, but physicians believe this due to the skull fracture he suffered.

Hallard is one of the men known to medical science who has survived a punctured brain.

Marvin Miller, Operator of Walnut Glen Farm, Taken to Berger Hospital

Marvin Miller, Circleville Rt. 2, operator of the Walnut Glen stock farm, is in Berger hospital with a severe cut on his back and head bruises suffered in an auto mishap Monday evening on the Darbyville pike.

The sheriff's department reported the Ford was struck in the rear, whirled around and overturned in the center of the road.

Mr. Miller was thrown out of the car in the road and was brought to Berger hospital by Gardner Dewey, a nearby farmer. Dr. G. D. Sheets treated his injuries. His condition was reported favorable by hospital attendants.

The Chevrolet, after striking the Miller car, went into a ditch and was stopped by a field fence. Mr. Mitchell was not injured. He told county officers he was trying out the auto before purchasing it from the Columbus garage.

INDICATE RELIEF TO CONTINUE IN MANY COUNTIES OF STATE

Failure of Ohio Solons to Act May Force Uncle Sam to Carry on Program

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24—Despite the federal government's repeated assertion that all direct relief will cease in Ohio Nov. 1, there are some indications that the dole in some form will be continued in the majority of counties after that date.

An official high in the relief administration disclosed today "some form of direct relief will be continued after Nov. 1." He preferred not to be quoted but he explained that since the state apparently will not be in a position by that time to shoulder the relief burden and since the counties are having financial difficulties, the federal authorities will and must do something about the needy who face the danger of being dropped from the dole.

May Aid Others

Liquidation of FERA organizations have started in 17 or 18 counties with the expressed announcement that no federal money will be spent there after liquidation dates, but even these counties may fall under the program that is being considered at Washington.

Meanwhile, the legislature prepared to vote Wednesday on the question of submitting a $40,000,000 bond issue to the electorate for approval to take care of relief needs for the next two years. It is doubtful whether the legislature will pass the resolution to place this question on the ballot, but even if it does, observers freely predicted that the issue would fail in the November voting.

Predict Failure

Solons returning for the resumption of the special session also were free of the opinion that the Governor's new proposal to submit the PWA building program for welfare institutions to the voters also would fail in the legislature. Under the Governor's new plan, the voters would decide whether an $8,000,000 bond issue would be authorized, which together with the Legislative appropriation of $3,000,000 and a WPA grant of $9,000,000 would make up the necessary funds to carry out the program.

CHILLICOTHE VOTES ON ISSUE OF BONDS

CHILLICOTHE, Sept. 24—Chillicothe went to the polls today to vote on the $252,000 bond issue for construction of an intercepting sewer and sewage disposal plant as a work relief project.

A 65 per cent favorable vote is necessary to pass the issue. With only one yes-and-no ticket to count an early return was expected. Members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce volunteered their services as special election officials.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24— Suburban Upper Arlington and nearby Canal Winchester voters today cast ballots in special elections on proposed bond issues.

It was an $185,000 bond issue for an addition to the high school building in Upper Arlington, and a $50,000 issue for a sanitary sewage disposal plant in Canal Winchester. Both are federal aid projects.

SET DATE FOR ELECTION SUIT

Supreme Court Moves Up Mandamus Action Against Governor Davey

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24—The date for hearing a mandamus suit filed by local taxpayers seeking to compel Governor Davey to call an immediate special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Congressman-at-large Charles V. Truax, Bucyrus Democrat, today was advanced from Oct. 9 to Oct. 2, by the State Supreme court.

Seba H. Miller, clerk of the supreme court, explained the date was moved up "because of th importance of the suit."

Davey has issued proclamations setting the regular primaries next May as the date for holding a special primary election to nominate candidates for the vacant congressional seat and establishing the date of the regular 1936 election in November as the date of the special election.

Armstrong's action protests these steps by the governor on the grounds Ohio will be without representation of one congressman-at-large, to which the state is entitled, for more than a year.

If the tribunal should require the governor to call the special primaries and election earlier than he has intended, election officials might rush preparations for holding the primaries this November on the same date as the off-year municipal elections.

A special election might then be held at the date of the primaries next May and a congressman-at-large might qualify to serve from May until the following January when a regularly elected candidate would take the seat left vacant by Truax.

St. Louis Watches Marchers

Missouri's Governor Orders Holiday So Everyone Can Watch Legionnaires

ST LOUIS, Sept. 24—Donning its best bid and tucker, the American Legion today staged its annual "big show" —the gigantic parade of massed legion units—as St. Louis and the surrounding territory took a holiday to enjoy this most colorful of all the events of the legion's seventeenth annual convention.

It was a legal as well as an atmospheric holiday. For Gov. Guy B. Park, by formal proclamation, set aside the day for Missouri to enjoy the spectacle. Business houses closed or operated on skeleton staffs to permit employes to view the parade. Long before parade time, however, every vantage point along the route was occupied and the streets were packed to the suffocating point.

While the tramp of marching feet, still keeping perfect step after seventeen years, and the blare of band music filled the air, the legion's committees set about winnowing through the mass of official business that must be finished by Thursday. And the partisans of candidates for national commander to succeed Frank Belgrano, Jr., of San Francisco, went into huddles in an effort to solve the election problem.

PEACE THEME OF CATHOLICS

100,000 Dignitaries Attend Eucharistic Congress in Cleveland

on earth" became the theme today of the seventh national Eucharistic congress, which has drawn to Cleveland 100,000 Catholic church dignitaries and laymen in the greatest religious assemblage the nation has known in a decade.

The peace keynote was sounded today, at the first of five solemn pontifical masses to be celebrated during the congress, first by Patrick Cardinal Hayes, personal representative of Pope Pius XI, and then by Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati.

Cardinal Hayes, celebrant of the mass, read the bible verse that contains the divine commandment to "Love One Another," and said:

"May this congress prove a mighty prayer that the menacing clouds of war may be dissapted by the radiant splendor of the prince of peace."

Archbishop McNicholas, in his sermon, struck out at "blighting indifferentism," at "an exaggerated nationalism," which, he said, has brought the world to the very verge of war. He pleaded for the people to bring back the sacramental Christ.

More than 25,000 persons, estimated to be the largest crowd ever to fill the hall, crowded into public

SIX PERISH AS SHIP FOUNDERS

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 24—At least six men perished today when the S. S. Hurry-On foundered off Cape Breton.

Seven other men were reported to have been saved.

Bodies of those who perished were found in a lifeboat which drifted ashore.

The small motor vessel went aground in St. Francis harbor, Guysboro-co, last January and, at that time, grave fears were expressed for her crew, skippered by Captain William Carter.

On that occasion, the Hurry-on was tossed about by high seas for two days before icy winds abated sufficiently for the members of the crew to make their way to the mainland.

BICKFORD, ACTOR INJURED BY LION

Swift action by studio attendants who leaped onto the set prevented the beast from following up its advantage and closing its huge jaws on Bickford's throat, it was said. The first rush of the animal had knocked the actor to the ground where he was helpless, as the lion, known as "Tarzan" crouched for a second spring.

Rushed to a hospital it was said Bickford would recover but it will be necessary for him to remain under the care of surgeons for some time to prevent infection.

Only a few weeks ago, in the same picture, Bickford was severely clawed by a black leopard.

At the same time in another hospital Mabel Stark, circus performer, was recovering from injuries sustained when she was attacked in Phoenix, Arix., Saturday, by a Bengal tiger she was training.

Miss Stark was brought here for treatment of a broken elbow, torn back muscles and deep lacerations of the abdomen and back. She will recover, it was said.

BEDLUM RULES GOTHAM WITH BOUT NEARING

Over 100,000 to Watch Inter-Racial Meeting of Louis and Baer

ODDS LENGTHENING

Baer Denies Injury to His Right Hand

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — With frantic, hectic box office men admitting that more than 100,000 tickets had already been sold, Max Baer and Joe Louis, principals in the most dramatic heavyweight fight of all time, headed this morning for their rendezvous before the scales where they will weigh in for tonight's inter-racial brawl at the Yankee stadium. Baer, grumpily denying that his right hand was injured, hadn't far to go and hence was the last to leave for the boxing commission offices.

Louis is Favorite

A rapidly receding choice in the betting at odds around 2½ to 1, the former champion arrived in town last night and put up at a midtown hotel, his demeanor being hardly that of the rollicking playboy. It was evident that Baer resented a situation that had made the great negro puncher a general favorite.

Louis, the 21-year-old ex-amateur who has knocked out 20 out of 24 men in a bit more than a year, left his Pompton Lakes camp this morning with camp attaches raising a cheer in the dust that followed the cavalcade. The colored fighter, apparently calm and unimpressed amid the furore of the occasion, was even less communicative than usual, except to deny that he intended to marry Marva Trotter before the fight. The wedding, it seemed, probably would take place in Harlem tomorrow.

To Celebrate Victory

Up there, where the colored population was augmented by racial additions from all parts of the country, the marriage was fully expected to be a celebration of Louis' victory over the white man.

LANDOWNERS ASK ROAD EXTENSION

The extension of Kibby road north from the Pennsylvania tracks to Route 22 is asked in a petition filed with the county commissioners Monday by a group of Deercreek-twp landowners.

The new road would enter Route 22 about 1½ miles west of Williamsport. A lane now extends about a half-mile south of Route 22 and would be used in the development of the road project.

Persons now living in the vicinity of Kibby road have to make a circle around Jones' mill into Williamsport. The new road would cut considerable distance from the present route to Williamsport and also make a direct road to Clarksburg.

Delegates Named at Monday Club Meeting

At the regular meeting of the Monday club last evening in the Library trustees room delegates and alternates were selected to attend the meeting of the South East district in Logan.

Mrs. William Mack and Miss Elizabeth Dunlap were chosen delegates, and Mrs. C. C. Watts and Mrs. Emmitt L. Crist are alternates.

The History and Geography division was in charge of the program presented at the close of the business session. Mrs. C. C. Watts was the leader

Miss Alice Ada May discussed "The Government of Spain to the Abdication of Alfonso XIII." She traced the government of Spain from its origins including the growth of the absolute monarchy from the time of Ferdinand and Isabelle to the rise of the movement for a constitutional monarchy in the nineteenth century. The use of the spirit of revolt in Spain against disgraceful and oppressive circumstances and against the untrammeled domination of the monarchy and army can be clearly traced from 1808 to the revolution of 1931. The overthrow of Alfonso XIII therefore can be seen as the flowering of a counter-movement deep-rooted in the past in which finally the liberal majority triumphed over the ruling minority.

Mrs. E. S. Thacher spoke on the "Republic of Spain." Her paper began by telling of the events which have taken place with rapid fire succession, personalities have risen to unbelieveable heights of popularity and fallen to utter political oblivion in less time than it takes to tell; political parties have come into being over night played their role and made their exists. The various groups and their favored themes are the church using the lash of excommunication; the workers using the strategy of physical combat and strike and the civil guard using the age old method of mutiny. Prior to this the grandees and peasants were the two main social divisions of Spain but when the war came the Spanish industrialist group and a proletariat. How ever hard the clergy and grandee may struggle to keep the old Spain the new classes are breaking through. The indications are for more strife, more movement, but in all events the return of the old regime is a remote possibility.

THE STORY OF JOE AND JOHN AND HERB

THIS is the story of the adventures of three upstanding American citizens under the New Deal—Joe Green, John Corntassel and Herbert Hoover.

Consider Joe Green—that isn't his name, but he's a real person in Chicago. Joe is a skilled mechanic. He is employed by the International Harvester Co. He helps make machinery that John Corntassel uses in his business. But back in 1932, when low prices put John out of the machinery market, Joe was automatically laid off and ceased to be an economic unit.

He managed to squeak through, however, because the company loaned him money against the day of returning prosperity, and he was handy at odd jobs. Today Joe is back in the picture working five and a half days a week at good pay.

Which brings us to John Corntassel. You remember him. He's the fellow who, as the story goes, was paid for loafing and plowing under things. But it now appears that his plow struck something yellow and exceedingly beautiful. Anyway, the newspapers have discovered that thar's gold in them thar fields. Publishers are inviting national advertisers to come out and get some of the money through the use of space in the papers that farmers read.

Farmers Have Cash for Needed Supplies

"Farm Comeback Over Whole Nation Now Opening Up Vast, Rich Markets," is the pleasant headline that graces the front page of Editor & Publisher, national newspaper guide, in a supplement devoted to John, his tall corn, fat hogs, lowing kine — and pocketbook. ". . . . the present fact is that the farm population, comprising one-third of the whole, is now prepared to spend money for urgently needed supplies. "This is good news for sellers and advertisers of commodities," observes the editor.

Although Mr. Hearst is personally shrieking to high heaven against the New Deal, a writer on his Omaha paper, the Bee-News, happily informs us that, aided by $40,000,000 corn-hog AAA reduction fees, "a golden stream of buying power" is blessing John in Nebraska. "New automobiles and trucks flash along the highways," he reports. "Farm machinery sales have advanced and all products have wider and surer markets."

And while the Chicago Tribune's editorial columns burn with indignation against "Corn" Wallace and all his works, Frank Ridgway, farm editor of that journal, contributes an article headed with the information that dollars are rolling along rural Illinois roads.

To Iowa's Farmers — a Half Billion

Here's news, too, that may or may not chirk up Sen. Dickinson, Iowa's No. 1 old dealer. Anyway, it should remind him of the good old days that he's been yearning for. "Iowa," reports J. S. Russell, farm editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune," sees a half billion dollars in farm income, the biggest since 1930. . . . In the production of new agricultural wealth today, Iowa farmers lead other states with an average of approximately $40,000,000 monthly in farm income during the first half of 1935."

So it goes. From all over the broad, fat land the story of John's gold strike is repeated: "Farmers of Indiana using black ink; gain $100,000,000." . . . "Implement dealers and manufacturers report nearly 100 per cent increase in business." . . . "Northwest farmer has chin up —Agriculture staging a tremendous comeback this year—Trade revival in full swing."

"Kentucky merchants jubilant as farmers harvest good crops." . . . . "Southwest in spirited recovery—live stock now selling at a profit—stockmen making more money than ever before during like period." . . . "Gross Wisconsin farm income this year will top $300,000,000 for the first time in five years." . . . "Millions in new wealth pour into North Dakota farmers' pockets." . . . "South Dakota crop comeback puts farmers in market for goods." . . . "Sale of 1935 crop will start river of wealth flowing." . . . "Michigan harvesting better than average fruit crop . . ." So much for John.

Now let's turn to the happiest story of all—the one about Herbert Hoover. It appears that while Mr. Hoover is publicly and politically viewing with alarm, privately he is getting in on the New Deal's prosperity ground floor. According to John E. Pickett, editor of the Pacific Rural Press, Mr. Hoover and his son, Allan, are among the largest investors in farm land.

"The smart money men feel," Pickett says, "that farm land is the soundest investment of all, and they are encouraged by the fact that agriculture has made the best recovery of any major industry and has a cheerful outlook ahead."

So it seems that things are looking up for Joe and John and Herb. Joe has a job making implements for John. John is in clover. Herb is getting in on the "smart money." We're all feeling better. What could be nicer?

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

HELPING DECLARER

UNNECESSARY use of signals does partner no good and helps declarer. Neither North nor South should have given any signal on the following hand. Had that been done it is probable that declarer would have gone down on his contract. A less able player surely would have done so, as the only East player to go game on this hand in a duplicate contest was at a table where both defenders signaled their desires.

(West, North, East, South)

♠ 7 5 3

♣ K Q J 10 2

Bidding went: East, 1-No Trump, third hand; South, 2-Clubs; West, 2-Spades; East, 3-No Trumps, rather than support partner, who could bid 4-Spades in case he wished to do so. This ended the auction.

Of course the opening lead was the K of clubs, which was allowed to hold. Declarer's Ace won the second club lead, as South hardly would have bid upon fewer than five, so his partner could hold no more of the suit.

Declarer ran off four spade tricks. Both defenders followed suit on the first three leads. On the fourth lead of spades North signaled for a heart lead, by starting an echo. Declarer let go a low heart. Very unwisely South discarded his 8 of diamonds, plainly showing possession of the X of that suit. He should have discarded the 6, denying possession of his sole means of re-entry. When the fate of the contract depended upon South's entry and running off his established clubs, the real smart thing for North to have done would have been to discard his lowest heart, leaving declarer to guess that South might have heart re-entry, but only seasoned players would have thought either of North's denial of wanting hearts led, or of South's denial of having diamond re-entry.

The thing which East would normally have done was to try the diamond finesse of his Q, which would have caused his downfall, but the flaming signals of both defenders disclosed the best, perhaps the only chance for fulfillment of his contract.

East took a single round of hearts. On this South played the 5, giving no definite information, until North gave the whole thing away by completing the heart echo. Another round of winning hearts and declarer had the whole story. South completed his echo in diamonds, showing only the K-X of diamonds left, and the three good clubs. Of course South was put in with a club, and given the four defensive tricks coming to his side. Then South had to lead away from his K of diamonds, giving the astute declarer his contract, which vulnerable

READ THIS FIRST:

On her twenty-fourth birthday Carol Kennedy, coming into a vast fortune, suddenly announces to her relatives that she is giving up her old home in Connecticut, where she has lived as an orphan, to move to New York to find happiness and freedom. Among those attending Carol's birthday party are her cousin, Kathy Prentice, and her fiance, Dr. Owen Craig, whom she is marrying for social prestige. Unattractive Carol, who knows nothing of parties, pretty clothes and beaux, secretly admires Owen. Carol astounds her old nurse when she tells her of her plan. In New York Carol looks up Isobel Bronson, an old school chum now in the real estate business, to obtain help in finding an apartment. Isobel suggests a cocktail party and cagerly helps Carol purchase proper clothes for the occasion. Carol tastes her first cocktail and meets Gary Crandall, attractive playboy, who shows an interest in her. He suggests they leave the party.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

"Where have you been and what do you do?"

CHAPTER 6

CAROL SAT stiffly beside Gary in the low-slung roadster and wondered what would happen when she had to talk. What could she say?

"Friend of Jeannie's?" Garry broke the silence.

"No. I was with Isobel Bronson."

"Good egg, Isobel," he commented, "lots more sense than most of that crowd."

"Then you like girls with sense?" she asked timidly.

"Please, lady." Laughingly he pretended to ward off a blow. "Not too much sense. Where do you suppose I'd get off in a case like that?"

Carol appraised him and then:

"Why, I think you are . . . are very attractive."

"And I see that you are a lady of very good taste and keen appreciation." Gary was not unused to compliments but there was something about the sincerity in Carol's voice that was unusual.

He studied her silently for a few moments before he said, "Where have you been and what do you do?"

"I don't do anything but I mean to. I mean I don't go to parties and I don't . . . well, I'm going to get a job."

Oh, Lord, another one, he thought, and she's going to wonder if I know anyone I can send her to.

"What sort of work do you do?" he asked her.

In a little lost voice she said, "I don't know."

"Well, what can you do?" he tried again.

"I can read and write five languages. I'm fairly well versed in the classics and . . . I think . . . I think I could sell something," she finished.

"Good lord, child, you can't live in New York on a secretary's salary."

"I don't think I'd have to. You see I have a little money."

"That's just dandy and here we are at Tony's. Hop out."

"This by any chance wouldn't be your favorite bar, would it?" he tossed over his shoulder as they entered.

"Heaven's, no. I've never been in one," she confessed.

Gary felt like an anthropologist. What a tale this would make!

They found a secluded table. Gary pushed aside the flowers better to look at the girl he had invited for no reason he could think of now.

"I suppose you'd like something pink and pretty?" he asked.

"Will you order something for me, Mr. Crandall? Something that will make me feel . . . careless?"

Mr. Crandall gasped. What did she mean, "careless"?

". . . This afternoon, I had my first cocktail at that party and I didn't like the way it tasted," she enlightened him.

"I'm not surprised. Those cocktails tasted like epicac. Suppose you try a brandy and soda?"

Carol would have tried a little gall and wormwood at that moment.

She wished he'd say something because she found herself tongue-tied.

Deftly he poured the contents of their glasses into a golden whirl and raising his glass to hers said:

"To our first drink together. Here's hoping it inspires confidences."

"Yours will be more interesting than mine," she ventured gravely.

He put his glass down and began to speak earnestly, "Believe me, I don't ask from idle curiosity, but will you please tell me how it happened that you've never had a cocktail before?"

"I really don't know," she admitted, "but you see I haven't been around very much except at college and traveling around the world."

"Not been around much? Piece." He said it quite as though Carol's explanation was reasonable. "How old are you, Carol?" more to it.

"Twenty-four yesterday."

"And what are you going to do with your life?"

"I'm going to come to New York, take an apartment and . . . I'll get some new clothes . . . different from these."

"I would," he assured her.

His words made her feel let down somehow. She'd been basking in the warm mellowness of the brandy she had—she might look a little—she felt. She wanted this man to like her.

Rather desperately she said, "I'm going to buy some backless evening gowns." He nodded approvingly.

Encouraged she went on, "Red ones!"

"Not all of them, surely, Carol!" he mocked.

"Oh, no," she answered gravely, "but most of them."

There was something pathetic about the girl. Gary studied the loneliness in her face.

"Are you unhappy, Carol?" he asked.

"Unhappy? . . . why . . . I don't suppose I ever thought about it before but lately . . . I . . . yes something strange has happened to me . . . as though I were another person."

"Perhaps you've fallen in love," he said.

"Oh, no," she answered readily. "You see I don't know any men except my uncles and . . . and my cousin's fiance. He's a doctor."

"And the doctor? Tall and handsome?" he asked casually.

"Yes," she tossed her head violently, "very. He's dark and . . . well I know what he looks like but I can't describe him."

He leaned across the table, "Haven't any one ever made love to you? . . . haven't you ever been . . . haven't you ever known what it is to have a man's arms held about you?"

Her breast came a little faster but she said nothing.

"Didn't any one ever tell you that you're the image of your sister, mother?"

Gary rubbed the edge of the table with his thumb and forefinger. Carol's pretty—personality—but—Gary looked at her. Carol looked up. Let it go at that. Would any man find my eyes like stars or this hair maddening to his senses? . . . ever?"

Gary lit a cigaret and handed it to her. Deliberately he lit his own and blew its smoke into the air before he answered and then he spoke but one word:

"Yes."

She parted her dry lips to ask, "Why?"

His voice was impersonal when he answered her, "The word is 'how,' not 'why' and I shall show you how to become a fascinating woman."

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Borah Will Produce Knockout Campaign for Republican Nomination

WASHINGTON—When the Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee convenes here tomorrow (Wednesday) William Edgar Borah will be sitting in his hotel in Boise, Idaho.

But for all practical purposes, his stern visage will be staring over the shoulder of each member of the Committee as it is called to order in Washington, D. C.

For no other problem facing the Republican Party is so acute, so vital as that of whether Senator Borah wants the Republican nomination; whether he can get it if he does; and finally, whether he could win against Franklin Roosevelt in 1936.

If logic were the rule of politics, the last question should be answered first. But since politics bows chiefly before power and selfish interest, the question which furrows the brows of GOP leaders is not so much whether Borah could be elected, but whether he wants the nomination badly enough to make them swallow him.

Borah Boom

They recognize that Borah's stock has been decidedly bullish for some time. His boom is the most significant development to date in the presidential scramble. What really worries rival Republican managers is the fact that the boom is cropping out in the most orthodox Republican circles. Applause for the Idaho Senator in the radical Northwest causes Old Guard GOP leaders no loss of sleep. But when a Borah-for-President Club is organized in Los Angeles and hails him as the defender of the Constitution against the "vagaries of New Dealism"—that's different.

Borah's Age

Most effective behind-the-back argument used against Borah is his age. He will be 73 by the time he could be inaugurated. No other President has been elected this late in life.

To those who know him well, however, Borah shows few effects the gruelling political grind of the last third of a century. His daily horseback rides probably were the best investment he ever made in his life.

And whether Old Guard leaders want him or not, Borah is going to make a fight for it.

The last strategy he mapped out to friends before leaving Washington was this:

Borah will put up such a knock - down - and - drag - out campaign that either he gets the nomination himself, or else gets the power to pick the candidate.

Looking around the political horizon, Borah has seen all too clearly that he holds the key power in the Republican Party. He can pick a Progressive and try to force him upon the Old Guard leaders, or he can insist on the nomination himself.

He says now, that he does not care which. But unless he is far different from most men, he will turn for the latter.

NOTE—Borah's vow that he would vote for Roosevelt before he would cast another ballot for Herbert Hoover.

German Flag

The adoption of the Swastika as the official flag of Nazi Germany is causing large sighs of relief to at least one individual in Washington.

He is stubble-haired Hans Luther who occupies the highly unenviable role of German Ambassador to the United States.

Before the Swastika became Germany's official emblem, Ambassador Luther was invited to speak at an international ceremony at Georgetown University. The flags of all nations were to be displayed. As each was hauled aloft, it was to be hailed by a blare of trumpets.

Ambassador Luther, who had got into some trouble with his government once before when the Swastika was not unfurled, had his counselor telephone in advance to state that two German flags must be used—the Swastika and the flag of the Republic.

But Father Edmund A. Walsh, Dean of the Georgetown Foreign Service School, demurred. To fly two German flags, he said, would attract undue attention and be a slight to other nations.

"If both flags are not flown," Counselor Leitner insisted, "the Ambassador cannot come."

Finally Father Walsh hit upon a compromise solution. He had the two flags sewn together back to back. The audience could see the flag of the Third Reich. But the Ambassador, sitting on the platform facing the audience, could make sure that he was saluting Hitler's cherished Swastika.

Pepsin Is Recommended For Use as a Medicine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE DESCRIBED yesterday the new instrument for seeing the inside of the stomach directly. It is a tube with a light on the end and a series of mirrors inside, much like a periscope. How much it is destined to contribute to our diagnostic ability in stomach diseases remains to be seen.

Dr. Clendening

But it must not be supposed that even without the gastroscope we are impoverished in our means of diagnosis. The history in most cases of stomach trouble is so characteristic that it alone allows us to make a diagnosis in most instances. Besides that, we are able to extract the stomach contents and examine them chemically, and the X-ray has been of great aid in diagnosis.

Treatment also has advanced in late years. Most stomach troubles are due to the changes in the chemical secretion of the stomach, and these can be neutralized or supplied as the necessity arises.

In this chemical treatment of stomach troubles, we pay more attention to the acid of the stomach than to the digestive enzymes. It is peculiar that pepsin has not been used more in medicine.

The first use of pepsin was in 1851, when Dr. P. W. Ellsworth, of Hartford, Conn., was treating a patient who had an obstruction of the gullet or esophagus. One day the boy tried to swallow a bit of meat and it became wedged in the stricture so that he could swallow nothing else. All efforts to remove it were unavailing, when Dr. Ellsworth thought if he applied some stomach juice it would dissolve the meat. And it did.

Pepsin as a medicine, to come up to the United States standards, is required to digest 3,000 times its weight of coagulated egg albumen. What a wonderful substance, and yet it is little used today in medical treatment.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

BETTING FAVORS JOE LOUIS, 2 TO 1, OVER MAXIE BAER

About This And That
In Many Sports

EITHER CAN WIN

Take your choice; the Louis-Baer fight tonight has the boys guessing; not so many of them, however, since most are on Louis but the fight's going to be a honey anyway you take it — It will be knock-down-drag-out with both boys capable of giving it and at least one able to give it — Baer though losing the title to Braddock, has never been knocked off his feet — Louis has never been forced to go that far, usually brushing off his opponent before he could land a telling blow ***

HARLEM VS. GHETTO

It'll be Harlem against the Ghetto tonight and more power Mike Jacobs and his million-dollar gate — Looks like good old Democratic prosperity is here to stay with the faithful laying their mazuma on the line — scalpers, they say, are asking $200 for ringside seats — and getting it ***

CARDS FACE WALL

The Cardinal-Cub series will be premature world's series with Detroit sitting back and laughing — No matter who wins the 5-game series is going to take some sap from somebody and Detroit won't be a bit angry about it — By losing Monday, 0-12, to the Pirates, the Cardinals must win every game of the Chicago series to carry off the National league gonfalon, a seeming impossibility with the Cubs going as they now are — By losing to Pittsburgh, St. Louis dropped 3 1-2 games back of the Grimm-men — If the Cards should lose again today they will trail four games since Chicago is not playing — That means all five games must be won — Should they win today and cut the edge to three games, they still need them all, because to win four and lose one would leave the title race in a tie ***

DEANS AND HALLAHAN

It looks to us like the Cardinal mound choices will be J. Dean, P. Dean, Hallahan, J. Dean and P. Dean in the five games while the Cubs will hurl Warnecke, Lee and Root and with those three Charlie hopes to clinch the title ***

VALENTINE HAS WINNER

Charlie Valentine, veteran race driver who first saw the light of day in Circleville, has developed another winner on the enclosed track — It is Calumet Ferrona — This filly won the Ohio colt racing association stake for three-year-old trotters at both the Marysville and Sidney fairs. She was the class of the field in both events and is considered a most promising racing prospect for next year. The jinx started on Valentine's trail in the preparation of his horses during the spring at Lexington, Bonnycastle, rated by many experts as the outstanding aged pacer, was the first to go wrong. Then his fast trotter, David Thornton, met with an injury which put him temporarily on the shelf. After returning to form, David Thornton threw a splint in his first start and was permanently retired for the year. His Hambletonian candidate, Calumet Finery, after training in 2:07 over the Columbus half-mile oval, disappointd in the rich classic and also in the Governor's Cup event at the state fair, and Charley decided to hold him over until 1936.

TIGERS START DRILLING FOR HOLY ROSARY

Long Workout Held Monday evening; Reger Books Three New Officials

Circleville high school football followers will get to see three new officials perform in Friday's game against Holy Rosary on the local grid. The game starts at 3 o'clock.

Faculty Manager Elmer Reger announced today that Herschel K. Pope of Wellston, Ohio U. grad, will referee; Carlisle O. Dollings, Columbus, Ohio N. grad, will umpire, and Robert Terhune, Ohio State grad now principal and coach at Jackson-twp, will be headlinesman.

Pope and Dollings are both former Ohio university athletes and both are No. 1 as officials. Terhune, coming here from Fayette-co, has already made many friends.

Long Drills Held

Coach Jack Landrum started giving his boys the "wolks" Monday evening in preparation for the Holy Rosary encounter. Every athlete on the field knows his work is cut out for him this week-end since the Columbus Irish crew defeated Hillsboro last week, 7-0, and has not lost a ball game in two years.

"Twould be a real feather in the caps of the local crew if they could turn the trick on the invaders.

Nearly all the boys reported in good shape Monday and went through a long workout. It was about 6:30 before the dressing room order was heard. Every boy on the field is willing to work and all want to make the best showing possible against the highly-touted Rosary crew.

Even Larger Crowd

Indications are that Friday's crowd will be larger than that of last week when the Tigers won their first game in three years, 6-0, from Groveport.

Try, Try, Again Schwartz Motto

Ed Schwartz, Chillicothe restaurant sandwich shop proprietor, offers a good fish story and kept the evidence to prove his case to skeptics.

While fishing in Paint creek Schwartz got a strike and the fish took his line. A short time later he had another strike and landed a nice bass. Out of its mouth protruded two lines. It was the same fish that had previously broken his line.

Schwartz saved the head, hooks and line to display in his shop window.

These Are Tough Days for Football Coach— He Must Weigh Tonnage Against Mileage

By Harry KIPKE
Football Coach, University of Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 24—Coaches these days are spending just about as much time in a brown study — a state of mind and not part of a residence — as they are in directing practice on the drill grounds. Selection of players is the big problem. The training grind is now well along and the time is approaching when starting lineups will have to be picked.

Imagine a coach with three aspiring young centers, for instance, One weighs 240 pounds, another around 194, and the third is about five pounds under the middle man. The answer would seem to be the 240-pounder. That's a pretty good tonnage to anchor a line around.

But what if that big fellow isn't very shifty; has difficulty in getting from one place to the next with satisfying celerity, and hasn't yet learned how to use that accummulation of pounds to the best advantage against the avoirdupois opposite him? The next fellow is 50 pounds lighter, but the absence of those 50 enables him to "move out of there." Is the speed more important than the weight?

Center has to Step Around

Yes, it certainly is, particularly in that style of defense which brings the center out of the line to back up the forwards. In that post he must be able to move quickly to the point of attack and must be able to drift back or to the side to cover the flat zones in meeting a forward pass offensive. When his own team is attacking, his job is by no means ended when he has passed the ball.

The big man, with his bulk, can hold the opposing linemen in check until the attack is under way. But after that the center has to break through and move fast to help mow down the defending secondary. And there is no law in this game of football to prevent a center tackling under punts. A lot of them have done it. The hefty fellow has trouble and a lot of it, in getting down the field.

And right there in that matter of tackling under punts, the above mentioned coach in his "brown study" is worrying about his tackles. Shall he pick beef or speed all other things being equal? He must have at least one tackle who can go down to make the kill under punts. The whole burden cannot be thrown on the ends.

A fleet tackle will make the majority of the kills under punts if his ends turn the punt receiver into his arms. In the majority of punt combinations it is the left tackle who bears this burden, but again there is no man-made law which prevents the fellow playing on the other side of the line from getting in the glory wagon.

A massive tackle, even if he isn't particularity fast, has a lot in his favor. It's hard to push him out of the way, and if he manages to charge into the opposing backfield he's messy to have around. Just about the best kind of a tackle to have on your team, though, is the fellow who is always doing the unexpected, the man who plays in one place for one minute, and is somewhere else the next. The big, slow man can't do that; he has to set himself in the most inconvenient place—for the opposition—and then do what he can from there.

Tonnage vs. Mileage

But this problem of tonnage versus miles per hour becomes more acute when the guards are discussed. In the olden days the biggest, bulkest fat man in school could fit into almost any coach's delight. On the defense even today bulk is important.

"Grab legs" is often the instruction given to the guards when the other team has the ball. A 220-pounder, anchored in the middle of that line alongside a teammate with the same physical attributes, makes it pretty tough going for any attack.

But it is something else again on offense. The guards have to move, and rapidly. It can almost be said that they have to be faster than your blocking halfback. The blocking guard has to leave his place in the line, race around to the point of attack and team up there with said back in bowling over possible tacklers.

Just about the same considerations apply to the ends. The coach who possesses a 200-pounder who can move from point to point is a lucky individual indeed. If those 200 pounds are distributed over about six feet, two inches of stature—there is an All-American in the making.

But what if that couple of hundredweigh of end can't move about? Well, he can do a lot of things well. He can muss up the advance guard of an attack; he can smother the flank of a defensive line; he can probably stop a few forward passes into the flat zone near him, and he may reach high enough to snag a forward pass now and then. His weight will probably stand him in good stead in bearing up under the pounding an end invariably receives.

But there his efficiency stops. He would be just about helpless in breaking up a complicated lateral pass attack which has to be watched, which can't be broken up by a burly smash at some one of its joints, but which must be stalked to its final leg before the "kill."

Is Kipke in "Brown Study"?

An end has to do just about as much running as the back. If his team's attack includes a lot of forward passes he will find himself chasing down the field at top speed time after time. And top speed means top speed, for if those catchers can just outhoof the defensive there is nothing on earth — save a broken arm or a decrepit tosser — can stop touchdowns. Speed is imperative in getting down under punts. What's the use of sky-rocketing those spirals 60 yards down the field if the catcher is going to race 30 yards before he meets a tackler?

You might think it unusual for a coach to be worrying about too much weight in the line. But maybe you have been reading a few news stories lately and have noticed that there is a coach in Ann Arbor, Mich., whose line averages 214 pounds or more per man. If you have read that far you also have noted that he has been turning track coach lately, trying to get some zip into the legs that trundle that tonnage around.

Joe Louis' Intended Says Wedding to Precede Bout

NEW YORK, Sept. 24— Approximately four hours before he answers the bell for his battle with Max Baer at the Yankee stadium, Joe Louis, the brown bomber of Detroit, will answer the bell for a vastly more important engagement.

At 6 o'clock, unless there's a last minute change in plans announced by the bride herself, Joe will hear the chiming of wedding bells.

Marva Trotter, the preety ex-stenographer from Chicago, said this morning that she and Joe would become man and wife before the fight.

The ceremony, she revealed, will take place at the home of friends in the Bronx. The Rev. Walter Trotter, brother of the bride-to-be, will officiate; their sister, Novella, will be bridesmaid, and John Roxborough, the boxer's manager, probably will act as best man.

HANDLERS DIFFER

The comely girl's confidence the wedding would precede the stadium fisticuffs found no corroboration among Joe's handlers, however they declared

"There'll be no wedding until after the fight. We gotta keep our boy calm."

And they were so busy keeping Joe calm that Joe himself didn't get a chance to verify his fiance's announcement.

The bride-to-be did succeed in talking with her boy friend by phone, however, and she's certain there'll be no hitch in the plans for the nuptials.

In fact she's much more excited over the wedding than over the big fight. She has abandoned her plan to wear "just a suit" because

"A girl gets married only once, and I want to wear white."

Therefore she will adorn herself in an ermine trimmed white velvet gown.

"I'm interested in making a home for Joe," she declared. "I can cook if I have to, although I haven't had much experience. But I make all my own clothes and I like to sew."

BOTH FIGHTERS ARE CONFIDENT

NEW YORK, Sept 24 — There's no doubt in the minds of either Max Baer or Joe Louis as to which of them is going to win tonight. Here's what they say about it this morning:

By Max Baer

"Joe Louis is in for the hardest fight in his career. I honestly believe I will knock him out. I am in perfect condition and hitting as hard as I ever did. I am going out to score a knockout in quick time, and if Louis nails me he is going to find that at last he has come across a fighter who can take it."

By Joe Louis

"I don't think I'll need more than six or seven rounds — ten at the outside. If Baer comes out punching the way he says he will, maybe I'll get him in a hurry. I only hope he lives up to what he says about comin' to me. If he plays safe, and doesn't take chances, it will take me longer."

RECORDS DISCLOSE ABILITY OF PAIR

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—Old man "past performances" tells his own story about California Max Baer and Detroit Joe Louis, who tangle at the Yankee stadium here tonight.

In six years of professional fighting, Baer fought 50 ring battles. He won 31 of these by knockouts, ten by decisions, enough to carry him to the heavyweight championship. Max lost eight bouts, and one was a no-decision contest.

Joe Louis, in 14 months of professional glove-tossing has had 24 bouts, and won all of them. Twenty were by the K. O. route. As an amateur Joe fought 52 times, and won the national A. A. U. 175-pound title at St. Louis in 1934.

Clarence Francis, Pickaway-co game protector, announced Tuesday that the 1,600-acre Ruggles estate property in Pickaway-twp has been leased to the state conservation department for a game preserve.

Of the 1,600 acres, more than 150 acres are wooded.

As a result of the action the entire property will be barred to hunters either with dogs or guns. The land will be well-posted, Mr. Francis reported.

A large number of pheasants have already been placed on the land and other game will be delivered there shortly, the game protector said.

STATE LEASES RUGGLES LAND FOR PRESERVE

NON-TITLE FIGHT TO MAKE HISTORY; GOTHAM EXCITED

Jacobs is Prepared to Start Fight Early in Case of Rain; Baer's Performance Against Braddock Gives Louis Favorite's Spot.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—Go back to Reno and twenty-five years ago, the day when Jeffries and Johnson caught and held the headlines. It isn't enough. Twenty-five years are no measure of this tremendous thing that is about to happen. Make it generations, centuries, ions: Go back practically to the beginning of time and even then you'll find something innate, instinctive and older than civilization itself.

You'll find it again at the Yankee stadium tonight when Max Baer and Joe Louis are to do violence in an inter-racial prize fight, while a record crowd of more than 100,000 contrive to make a pagan holiday of the kind that caused Nero to fiddle and Rome to burn. There is no championship at stake tonight, only the inborn feelings of the ages.

20 Knocked Out

All Harlem is alive and ready to revel in the celebration it feels is ordained for this negro heavyweight whose face is so blank and whose punch is so terrible. Twenty of the twenty-four white men he has faced in a little more than a year of professional fighting have been knocked out. His fame, in fact, has spread like a peculiar contagion that draws all men within its sinister scope, the result being the first million-dollar gate of the horizontal era and the sixth in history.

This morning, hotel public rooms looked like dormitories with strangers sleeping side by side. Tonight, the stadium will seat 92,650, with the end hardly yet. They'll stand in the rear, they'll cling to pillars and supports. They'll do anything, pay anything to get inside. Nothing like it has ever happened before. Nothing like it may ever happen again.

In one corner will be the white man, Baer, good enough to win the heavyweight championship but not sensible enough to keep it. In the other, the solemn-faced negro, Louis, who may yet be great enough to take it. Baer, with the body of a God and the mind of a mountebank lost the title in apparent jest a few months ago and now in anger would attempt to take it back. He's a strange mixture of greatness and puerility, a tremendous hitter with his right hand—when the spirit wills it.

Louis 2 to 1 Bet

But Louis hits tremendously with both and is at least 2 to 1 in the betting, with millions likely to change ownership on the result. Those same millions have quoted him at a record "low" of 8 to 5 by a knockout inside the fifteen-round distance. A singular story, this colored boy from the Detroit auto plants who drinks and smokes not, neither does he smile. He's only 21 and he's to be married tonight some time after the fight, some say before.

Oh, yes; this is a slightly insane situation but so far everything has proceeded with comforting results. Even the weather was favorable this morning, although Promoter Mike Jacobs was prepared, in the event of threatening clouds, to put the big fight on early, regardless of the broadcast, scheduled to begin at ten o'clock, eastern daylight time.

The promoter, in a word, was taking no chances with a gate that figures to do $1,200,000 or better, breaking the non-championship record held by Dempsey and Sharkey. It also was a record for fights held at $25 "tops" to say nothing of the fact that it furnished the fourth biggest gate in history. Morever, it seemed significant that it was the first fight to beat a million dollars without Jack Dempsey as one of the principals.

Dempsey Uncertain

Dempsey was scheduled to be in Baer's corner but last night was mumbling something that sounded like a desire to take an "out." He indicated his displeasure about stories that linked him with a rumored desire by Baer to "play rough" tonight in the hope of stealing the show. Considering the nature of the assemblage, such a course might be reprehensible in the extreme.

Meanwhile, the gentleman himself has given no indication of his intentions. He arrived at the Grand central looking a little grumpy after his ride from the training camp but otherwise seeming in excellent condition. He should be.

For this gift to the night clubs has lived the life of a recluse and an ascetic at the Speculator, N. Y., camp. He has trained so earnestly as to cause some to believe that his confinement will have a bad psychological effect upon one so ebullient. Still, the assumption is general that, if he can't win in the condition he's in, there will be nothing for it but to admit that he hasn't got it in him.

The only questions remaining had to do with his right hand, which Pete Reilly, the fight manager, claimed had been injured last week. Perhaps this claim had something to do with the sudden "lift" in Louis stock from 8-5 to 2-1 beyond, for Mr. Reilly, who likes to bet them, is not wholly without guile.

Actually the 2-1 would seem justified, off Baer's last fight with James J. Braddock and the impressive record of Louis. Baer looked like the worst fighter in the world against Braddock. Louis has looked the part of the best in knocking out Primo Carnera and King Levinsky.

There have been those who ask, "Can Louis take it?" and well they might, for the colored boy hasn't had to. It is on the off chance that Baer might score with one of those thundering rights that price-makers have made him 4-1 to win by a knockout, but, as others sensibly point out, if he couldn't hit Braddock, how is he going to hit Louis?

That's something that will have to wait for evening and the greatest and most dramatic crowd ever assembled for anything in New York city. The first Tunney-Dempsey fight beat it easily with 120,000 people; the second may yet do so. But this time at least twenty thousand will be left outside the field when they lock the crowd in tonight.

CARDS STILL HAVE CHANCE

Must Win From Now On To Win National League Title; Beaten By Pirates

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24— With mathamatics proving they still have a chance to repeat as National league champions but calm reasoning indicating the race is all over, the punch-drunk world champion Cardinals today faced a crisis that the famed Cardinal fighting spirit seemed inadequate to cope with.

Reeling from the terrific 12 to 0, 16-hit whipping the Pirates administered to them yesterday, the Cardinals in order to win the pennant were faced with the grim necessity of sweeping all five of their games with the berzerk Cubs here later in the week should they lose today's game with Pittsburgh. If the Cardinals should by some feat of legerdemain produce a fresh pitcher from its tired and jittery staff and capture today's game they still would be faced with the herculean task of winning four out of five from the Cubs in the "little world series" here even to tie for the league lead.

But with mathematics making it impossible, for the Cardinals, no matter how terrible their pitching may be, to lose the pennant until the Cubs come here tomorrow fresh from a two day rest, the "little world series" still appeared ready to set new attendance records at the Cardinals Sportsman's park home.

DRUMMOND WINS GOLFING HONORS

CHILLICOTHE, Sept. 24—Russell "Ikey" Drummond, ex-caddy, won the Chillicothe Country club golf championship Sunday from Curtis "Dutch" Reed, 5 up and 4 to go in a 36-hole match.

Drummond turned in a pair of 35s for the first 18 holes to be four under par. He negotiated the next nine in 37.

Spencer Dixon, another ex-caddy, won the title a year ago.

Reed back in July won the National Elks' golf title at the Columbus convention. The valuable Doyle trophy won in this classic reposes on the bar in the Chillicothe Elks lodge. Reed plans to go to Los Angeles next summer to defend his title in the convention.

REPORT LISTS PENSION PLAN FOR COUNTIES

Sherrill Says New Pension Laws Should Be Put in Effect Through State

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24— Following up recommendations for reorganizing the state division of aid for the aged to save $2,400,000 annually, the Ohio Government Survey committee today laid before Gov. Martin L. Davey a complete program for turning back to counties duties of pension administration.

Bitter in its condemnation of the method used in employing employes of the division, the committee charged that the department has transgressed civil service statutes. The survey report urged discharge of all employes now on the staff and employment strict civil service, as soon as new pension laws could be put into

Personel Incompetent

"Personnel responsible for administering Aid for the Aged in Ohio from the top down, with a few exceptions, is incompetent for this work and is responsible for a wastage of public funds running into millions," Col. C. O. Sherrill, former Cincinnati city manager, chairman of the committee, contended.

The survey committee recommended that a new law be drafted making the pension division one section of a state division of 'public assistance' in the state welfare department.

The group would concentrate in this division all forms of state-administered relief.

Decentralization of administrative authority, which has plunged Henry J. Derrodin, Akron, chief of the pension branch, into bitter controversy with county boards, is also urged by the committee.

Returned to County

The report, based on an exhaustive study of the operation of the year-old pension system, suggests that administration authority be lodged in county departments of welfare.

The proposed new legislation would require every county to set up welfare departments to administer all forms of relief as well as pensions.

"Membership of these boards would be local citizens, unpaid, non-partisan and responsible for co-ordination of the various types of relief, safeguarding it from politics, waste and inefficiency," the committee declared.

The survey also recommended that recipients of pensions be no longer required to transfer their property to the state and urges a $30 maximum monthly pension instead of $25, likewise urging that provision be made for medical care.

Strict conformance to federal provisions for pensions under the social security act is also stressed.

Col. Brehon Somervell

After President Roosevelt had touched a telegraph key in Washington, setting off the dynamite blast at Ocala, Fla., that started the $146,000,000 Gulf-Atlantic canal project, Col. Brehon Somervell, in charge of construction of the waterway, is pictured addressing the crowd. The 200-mile waterway will require six years to complete.

READ THIS FIRST:

On her twenty-fourth birthday Carol Kennedy, coming into a vast fortune, suddenly announces to her relatives that she is giving up her old home in Connecticut, where she has lived as an orphan, to move to New York to find happiness and freedom. Among those attending Carol's birthday party are her cousin, Kathy Prentice, and her fiance, Dr. Owen Craig, whom she is marrying for social prestige. Unattractive Carol, who knows nothing of parties, pretty clothes and beaux, secretly admires Owen. Carol astounds her old nurse when she tells her of her plan. In New York Carol looks up Isobel Bronson, an old school chum now in the real estate business, to obtain help in finding an apartment. Isobel suggests a cocktail party and eagerly helps Carol purchase proper clothes for the occasion. Carol tastes her first cocktail and meets Gary Crandall, attractive playboy, who shows an interest in her. He suggests they leave the party. Without disclosing her wealth, Carol enlists Gary's aid in helping to find a job and he also promises to show her how she can become a fascinating woman.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

"These will do nicely."

CHAPTER 7

CAROL KENNEDY felt that she had stepped into a world peopled with strange and wonderful things. She who had been so unaware of happiness and gaiety and youth had suddenly come alive.

It was as though she had slept through those years of learning and travel. The sights and sounds of familiar and strange places alike had sufficed so long as the inner girl had not been touched.

What had happened to Carol that suddenly she wanted parties and pretty clothes? She had never cared about those things before. Her plainness had never meant anything to her until now.

And now a man she had met less than an hour before could stir her to the depths of her being with desperate hope because he said that he knew the way to make her fascinating.

Gary's face blurred before her vision and when finally she found words, she said, "I don't know what you mean."

"What do you think I mean?" he parried. What could this drab little girl think he meant? Memories of beautiful women touched his lips with a smile. No, his interest in Carol wasn't a romantic one.

Carol felt lost. She didn't know much about men but she had heard of the wolf in sheep's clothing and why should Gary do anything for her? And besides, how could she ever hope to cope with any sophisticated situation? It may be a wonderful new world she had ventured into but it was too strange for her. How could she get anywhere in a world where you met a man at five o'clock and at six he asked you to put yourself in his hands so to speak. She'd put on her coat this minute. Instead she said:

"Can you . . . can you really do something for me?"

"I can, but not if you're going to be sensitive because I'm going to be brutal. I'm going to tell you truths. Let me look at your hands."

Obediently she laid her hands in his.

"These will do nicely," he said spreading her fingers out and touching the nails. "We'll paint them red."

"Oh, no," she protested.

"Think it's vulgar?" he questioned.

"Yes," she answered.

"I see where I shall have to start further back than I thought, Carol. Let me set you right. You suffered at the idea of painting your fingernails red. Look here, your hands are lovely, slim and tapering. They were made to be decorative and noticed. Bright red at the fingertips will bring out their fragile whiteness. . . . Are you beginning to see?"

Carol nodded; she was beginning to see.

"You have—I think—a good figure but it is difficult to judge with those unshapely clothes you're wearing."

Oh, dear, Carol thought, I figured the sweater and hat would save me and this suit did cost $200.

"You don't understand what I mean, do you?" he asked her gently.

"I'm afraid I don't but I'd like to."

"Well, let me explain. You have, I presume, a waistline, but looking at you I have no idea where."

A flush rose in her cheek.

"Don't be stuffy, Carol. Look at the whole thing impersonally and you won't be embarrassed.

"Shall I regard you as a big brother?" she asked timidly.

"For goodness' sake, don't! You regard me as . . . Well, we'll talk about that later.

"Let's get back to you. You weigh about 110 and you're tall so that means your figure should be good. Small bones. Good carriage. Nice skin. Dull now but makeup will take care of that."

Carol had an absurd impulse to tell him that her teeth were in good condition but she kept her silence in utter fascinations at his words.

"You'll want clever clothes. Things that cling I imagine."

"Oh," she said eagerly. "I have a very good dressmaker."

"I'm afraid you're not a walking advertisement of her arts."

"I'm going to buy a new lipstick (she didn't say her first) tonight and . . ."

"Oh, please don't do that, at least not yet. We begin with your hair"—he studied her—"I don't know whether we should have it cut or not."

Her hand went protectingly to the heavy knot at the back of her head. He did not notice.

"No, I think it should be thinned out, a yard cut off and a soft arrangement at the back. Yes, that would be queenly."

Queenly. Carol's ears began to burn. Fascinating. That such words might ever describe her she had never dreamed.

"How would you like an auburn shade?"

Lost in her own thoughts, Carol did not get the meaning of his question at once. Then:

"Dye my hair, do you mean!"

"My dear, please don't use such an unpleasant word. You must learn to take a pleasant attitude about all things and to term them in their proper words. Suppose we say 'shade'—yes, 'shade' is the word—your hair to a more becoming hue to give it luster and beauty."

"But I . . . I . . ."

"No more objections. Tomorrow we'll have a lark. You meet me here for lunch at one and call off your job-hunting in the afternoon and I'll take you to a beauty shop. It will be fun for both of us. . . . And look here—" Gary had the grace to look embarrassed. After all, poor kid maybe she didn't have any money—"let me pay for it and you can give it back to me when you marry a millionaire."

"All right," said Carol meekly. "I'll be . . . I'll be here at one."

In Police Court

George Anderson, Ashville Rt. 2, was held today in the Fairfield-co jail, Lancaster, for driving while intoxicated. Anderson's car did pranks on the city hospital grounds.

The communique stated, however, that Il Duce "examined the possibilities of developments of the question on the basis of the articles of the league government, and the attitude which Italy will adopt, according to circumstances."

Despite the caution reflected here, Il Duce continued his preparations for war. The cabinet passed a decree under which all males between the ages of 21 and 34 who previously had been declared medically unfit for army service must undergo a new and more thorough examination. This followed closely creation of a $243,000,000 war fund.

BEDLAM RULES

The streets and pool halls were alive at an early hour at which time home anxious glances were directed toward the weather which remained clear but somewhat chilly. There was no sign of disorder.

Downtown before fight headquarters the mad, merry scramble for tickets persisted, especially with special trains and busses bringing new customers from distant cities. In the face of this last minute rush, Promoter Mike Jacobs let it be known that he had some 5,000 additional tickets to dispose of. But a check with his box office men revealed that these were for standees.

New York, in other words, had never before seen such a crowd. It may run as high as 105,000 before the end is reached, thus displacing the Tunney-Dempsey fight at Chicago as the second greatest in point of attendance. The top in this direction was their Philadelphia fight, which packed in more than 120,000.

Louis went through light exercises at Pompton Lakes and left for the weighing in around 10:30, with a police escort.

Meanwhile, $100 was being considered a plausible price for tickets within the first fifteen rows. As for the general admissions, they were supposed to go on sale today but the promoter yielded to the clamor yesterday and was wiped out of these in less than an hour.

200 DISCUSSING COAL MINE STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24— The second day of the national strike of union bituminous coal miners today saw the industry's main activity being performed by 100 operators and 100 miners—none of whom dig coal.

These representatives of the industry were hard at work here in a hotel room trying to reach an agreement on a working contract which when approved, will sound off the whistles at the mines in 28 states and see 400,000 miners scurry back to the jobs they ignored Monday morning when their many-times-extended working contract expired.

Both sides have made concessions in the long deliberations, which started eight months ago and today the remaining obstacle to an agreement was over a piecework pay scale per-ton with the stand-pat demands of the operators and of the union being just one and one-half pennies apart.

Leaders of General Emilio Aguinaldo's National Socialist party, which was defeated in the recent Filipino elections, cabled President Roosevelt a protest against the conduct of the balloting for the first president of the commonwealth republic. ## BRAIN PUNCTURED, MAN, 24, IS SAVED

ROYAL OAK, Mich., Sept. 24—Successful in its battle to save the life of Burton Hallard, 24, whose brain was punctured by a nut and bolt, medical science today fought to ward off possible blindness and deafness.

Hospital attendants today feared the Toronto, Ont., man may be deaf in one ear and blind in one eye, both on the side of his head which was penetrated by the metal in an auto accident.

The young man continued to show improvement from the delicate operation seven days ago, but he told physicians he couldn't hear or see on the injured side of his head. His speech, too, was affected, but physicians believe this due to the skull fracture he suffered.

Hallard is one of the men known to medical science who has survived a punctured brain.

FARMER HURT IN ACCIDENT

Marvin Miller, Operator of Walnut Glen Farm, Taken to Berger Hospital

Marvin Miller, Circleville Rt. 2, operator of the Walnut Glen stock farm, is in Berger hospital with a severe cut on his back and head bruises suffered in an auto mishap Monday evening on the Darbyville pike.

Mr. Miller was driving west on the road about three miles east of Darbyville in his Model T Ford when his car was struck by a Chevrolet coach driven by Harry Mitchell, Walsh - ave, Columbus, and owned by the West Side Motors, Columbus. The sheriff's department reported the Ford was struck in the rear, whirled around and overturned in the center of the road.

Mr. Miller was thrown out of the car in the road and was brought to Berger hospital by Gardner Dewey, a nearby farmer. Dr. G. D. Sheets treated his injuries. His condition was reported favorable by hospital attendants.

The Chevrolet, after striking the Miller car, went into a ditch and was stopped by a field fence. Mr. Mitchell was not injured. He told county officers he was trying out the auto before purchasing it from the Columbus garage.

Deputies Earl Weaver and Bob Armstrong investigated the accident.

INDICATE RELIEF TO CONTINUE IN MANY COUNTIES OF STATE

Failure of Ohio Solons to Act May Force Uncle Sam to Carry on Program

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24—Despite the federal government's repeated assertion that all direct relief will cease in Ohio Nov. 1, there are some indications that the dole in some form will be continued in the majority of counties after that date.

An official high in the relief administration disclosed today "some form of direct relief will be continued after Nov. 1." He preferred not to be quoted but he explained that since the state apparently will not be in a position by that time to shoulder the relief burden and since the counties are having financial difficulties, the federal authorities will and must do something about the needy who face the danger of being dropped from the dole.

May Aid Others

Liquidation of FERA organizations have started in 17 or 18 counties with the expressed announcement that no federal money will be spent there after liquidation dates, but even these counties may fall under the program that is being considered at Washington.

Meanwhile, the legislature prepared to vote Wednesday on the question of submitting a $40,000,000 bond issue to the electorate for approval to take care of relief needs for the next two years. It is doubtful whether the legislature will pass the resolution to place this question on the ballot, but even if it does, observers freely predicted that the issue would fail in the November voting.

Predict Failure

Solons returning for the resumption of the special session also were free of the opinion that the Governor's new proposal to submit the PWA building program for welfare institutions to the voters also would fail in the legislature. Under the Governor's new plan, the voters would decide whether an $8,000,000 bond issue would be authorized, which together with the Legislative appropriation of $3,000,000 and a WPA grant of $9,000,000 would make up the necessary funds to carry out the program.

CHILLICOTHE VOTES ON ISSUE OF BONDS

CHILLICOTHE, Sept. 24 Chillicothe went to the polls today to vote on the $252,000 bond issue for construction of an intercepting sewer and sewage disposal plant as a work relief project.

A 65 per cent favorable vote is necessary to pass the issue. With only one yes-and-no ticket to count an early return was expected. Members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce volunteered their services as special election officials.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24 Voters in Upper Arlington and nearby Canal Winchester today cast ballots in special elections on proposed bond issues.

It was an $185,000 bond issue for an addition to the high school building in Upper Arlington and a $50,000 issue for a sanitary sewage disposal plant in Canal Winchester. Both are federal aid projects.

ADVENT OF AUTUMN SEES MERCURY FALL

The temperature dropped 39 degrees from the Monday afternoon high of 82 degrees.

SET DATE FOR ELECTION SUIT

Supreme Court Moves Up Mandamus Action Against Governor Davey

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24 The date for hearing a mandamus suit filed by local taxpayers seeking to compel Governor Davey to call an immediate special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Congressman-at-large Charles V. Truax, Bucyrus Democrat, today was advanced from Oct. 9 to Oct. 2, by the State Supreme court.

Seba H. Miller, clerk of the supreme court, explained the date was moved up "because of th importance of the suit."

Davey has issued proclamations setting the regular primaries next May as the date for holding a special primary election to nominate candidates for the vacant congressional seat and establishing the date of the regular 1936 election in November as the date of the special election.

Armstrong's action protests these steps by the governor on the grounds Ohio will be without representation of one congressman-at-large, to which the state is entitled, for more than a year.

If the tribunal should require the governor to call the special primaries and election earlier than he has intended, election officials might rush preparations for holding the primaries this November on the same date as the off-year municipal elections.

A special election might then be held at the date of the primaries next May and a congressman-at-large might qualify to serve from May until the following January when a regularly elected candidate would take the seat left vacant by Truax.

COUNTY PASTORS TO BE ASSIGNED

ADDIS ABABA—H. R. Knickerbocker reveals Ethiopia is still pessimistic regarding possibility of war against her, and that she believes easing of European tension during past few days does not especially brighten horizons for her.

ROME, Sept. 24—Again deferring definite action which the world had looked for him to take, Premier Benito Mussolini today cast out what many believed to be a hint he would accept a mandate over Ethiopia as part of a settlement of the east African crisis.

Il Duce presided over an important three-hours session of his cabinet, after which a cryptic communique was issued. The only definite action taken was calling of another cabinet session for Saturday, indicating Premier Mus-

WEATHER PERFECT FOR LOUIS-BAER GO

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — Even the weather bureau has gotten into the spirit of the thing. In response to Promoter Mike Jacobs' query as to what to expect in the way of weather for the Baer-Louis fight tonight, the bureau wired:

"Fair and warmer. Lots of stars. Hope you turn them away."

St. Louis Watches Marchers

Missouri's Governor Orders Holiday So Everyone Can Watch Legionnaires

ST LOUIS, Sept. 24 Donning its best bid and tucker, the American Legion today staged its annual "big show" the gigantic parade of massed legion units as St. Louis and the surrounding territory took a holiday to enjoy this most colorful of all the events of the legion's seventeenth annual convention.

It was a legal as well as an atmospheric holiday. For Gov. Guy B. Park, by formal proclamation, set aside the day for Missouri to enjoy the spectacle. Business houses closed or operated on skeleton staffs to permit employes to view the parade. Long before parade time, however, every vantage point along the route was occupied and the streets were packed to the suffocating point.

While the tramp of marching feet, still keeping perfect step after seventeen years, and the blare of band music filled the air, the legion's committees set about winnowing through the mass of official business that must be finished by Thursday. And the partisans of candidates for national commander to succeed Frank Belgrano, Jr., of San Francisco, went into huddles in an effort to solve the election problem.

PEACE THEME OF CATHOLICS

on earth" became the theme today of the seventh national Eucharistic congress, which has drawn to Cleveland 100,000 Catholic church dignitaries and laymen in the greatest religious assemblage the nation has known in a decade.

The peace keynote was sounded today, at the first of five solemn pontifical masses to be celebrated during the congress, first by Patrick Cardinal Hayes, personal representative of Pope Pius XI, and then by Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati.

Cardinal Hayes, celebrant of the mass, read the bible verse that contains the divine commandment to "Love One Another," and said:

"May this congress prove a mighty prayer that the menacing clouds of war may be dissapted by the radiant splendor of the prince of peace."

Archbishop McNicholas, in his sermon, struck out at "blighting indifferentism," at "an exaggerated nationalism," which, he said, has brought the world to the very verge of war. He pleaded for the people to bring back the sacramental Christ.

More than 25,000 persons, estimated to be the largest crowd ever to fill the hall, crowded into public

SIX PERISH AS SHIP FOUNDERS

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 24—At least six men perished today when the S. S. Hurry-On foundered off Cape Breton.

Seven other men were reported to have been saved.

Bodies of those who perished were found in a lifeboat which drifted ashore.

The small motor vessel went aground in St. Francis harbor, Guysboro-co, last January and, at that time, grave fears were expressed for her crew, skippered by Captain William Carter.

On that occasion, the Hurry-on was tossed about by high seas for two days before icy winds abated sufficiently for the members of the crew to make their way to the mainland.

MANY TO ATTEND CLUB BABECUE

The stage was set today for the big annual barbecue at the Pickaway Country club Wednesday with many club members and guests expected to spend the afternoon in golf or some other diversion, the big supper in the evening and the entertainment to follow later.

Ticket sales are reported brisk and the crowd attending the big party is expected to set a record.

A varied program has been planned and a big time is promised for all who attend.

It was disclosed today that 165 pounds of champion baby beef has been purchased for the barbecue.

It is estimated 200 persons will attend the big party.

They're Ready!

Max Baer

Joe Louis

More than 100,000 rabid fight fans will see these men in action tonight in New York in the most glamorous heavyweight fight since the heyday of the great Jack Dempsey. Most critics are favoring Louis, while Baer, a reformed playboy, also had his followers. The gate, expected to surpass $1,000,000, will be the greatest since Tunney-Dempsey.

BICKFORD, ACTOR INJURED BY LION

Swift action by studio attendants who leaped onto the set prevented the beast from following up its advantage and closing its huge jaws on Bickford's throat, it was said. The first rush of the animal had knocked the actor to the ground where he was helpless, as the lion, known as "Tarzan" crouched for a second spring.

Rushed to a hospital it was said Bickford would recover but it will be necessary for him to remain under the care of surgeons for some time to prevent infection.

Only a few weeks ago, in the same picture, Bickford was severely clawed by a black leopard.

At the same time in another hospital Mabel Stark, circus performer, was recovering from injuries sustained when she was attacked in Phoenix, Arix., Saturday, by a Bengal tiger she was training.

Miss Stark was brought here for treatment of a broken elbow, torn back muscles and deep lacerations of the abdomen and back. She will recover, it was said.

BEDLUM RULES GOTHAM WITH BOUT NEARING

ODDS LENGTHENING

Baer Denies Injury to His Right Hand

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — With frantic, hectic box office men admitting that more than 100,000 tickets had already been sold, Max Baer and Joe Louis, principals in the most dramatic heavyweight fight of all time, headed this morning for their rendezvous before the scales where they will weigh in for tonight's inter-racial brawl at the Yankee stadium. Baer, grumpily denying that his right hand was injured, hadn't far to go and hence was the last to leave for the boxing commission offices.

Louis is Favorite

A rapidly receding choice in the betting at odds around 2½ to 1, the former champion arrived in town last night and put up at a midtown hotel, his demeanor being hardly that of the rollicking playboy. It was evident that Baer resented a situation that had made the great negro puncher a general favorite.

Louis, the 21-year-old ex-amateur who has knocked out 20 out of 24 men in a bit more than a year, left his Pompton Lakes camp this morning with camp attaches raising a cheer in the dust that followed the cavalcade. The colored fighter, apparently calm and unimpressed amid the furore of the occasion, was even less communicative than usual, except to deny that he intended to marry Marva Trotter before the fight. The wedding, it seemed, probably would take place in Harlem tomorrow.

To Celebrate Victory

Up there, where the colored population was augmented by racial additions from all parts of the country, the marriage was fully expected to be a celebration of Louis' victory over the white man.

LANDOWNERS ASK ROAD EXTENSION

The extension of Kibby road north from the Pennsylvania tracks to Route 22 is asked in a petition filed with the county commissioners Monday by a group of Deercreek-twp landowners.

The new road would enter Route 22 about 1½ miles west of Williamsport. A lane now extends about a half-mile south of Route 22 and would be used in the development of the road project.

Persons now living in the vicinity of Kibby road have to make a circle around Jones' mill into Williamsport. The new road would cut considerable distance from the present route to Williamsport and also make a direct road to Clarksburg.

No action was taken on the petition Monday.

Recently Mrs. Medoff learned that Dr. Lorraine had died and had so worded his will that she will receive $170,000 before the end of the year because she maintained that promise.

Delegates Named at Monday Club Meeting

Mrs. William Mack and Miss Elizabeth Dunlap were chosen delegates, and Mrs. C. C. Watts and Mrs. Emmitt L. Crist are alternates.

The History and Geography division was in charge of the program presented at the close of the business session. Mrs. C. C. Watts was the leader

Miss Alice Ada May discussed "The Government of Spain to the Abdication of Alfonso XIII." She traced the government of Spain from its origins including the growth of the absolute monarchy from the time of Ferdinand and Isabelle to the rise of the movement for a constitutional monarchy in the nineteenth century. The use of the spirit of revolt in Spain against disgraceful and oppressive circumstances and against the untrammeled domination of the monarchy and army can be clearly traced from 1808 to the revolution of 1931. The overthrow of Alfonso XIII therefore can be seen as the flowering of a counter-movement deep-rooted in the past in which finally the liberal majority triumphed over the ruling minority.

Mrs. E. S. Thacher spoke on the "Republic of Spain." Her paper began by telling of the events which have taken place with rapid fire succession, personalities have risen to unbelieveable heights of popularity and fallen to utter political oblivion in less time than it takes to tell; political parties have come into being over night played their role and made their exists. The various groups and their favored themes are the church using the lash of excommunication; the workers using the strategy of physical combat and strike and the civil guard using the age old method of mutiny. Prior to this the grandees and peasants were the two main social divisions of Spain but when the war came the Spanish industrialist group and a proletariat. How ever hard the clergy and grandee may struggle to keep the old Spain the new classes are breaking through. The indications are for more strife, more movement, but in all events the return of the old regime is a remote possibility.

THE STORY OF JOE AND JOHN AND HERB

THIS is the story of the adventures of three upstanding American citizens under the New Deal. Joe Green, John Corntassel and Herbert Hoover.

Chicago. Joe is a skilled mechanic. He is employed by the International Consider Joe Green — that isn't his name, but he's a real person in Harvester Co. He helps make machinery that John Corntassel uses in his business. But back in 1932, when low prices put John out of the machinery market, Joe was automatically laid off and ceased to be an economic unit.

He managed to squeak through, however, because the company loaned him money against the day of returning prosperity, and he was handy at odd jobs. Today Joe is back in the picture working five and a half days a week at good pay.

Which brings us to John Corntassel. You remember him. He's the fellow who, as the story goes, was paid for loafing and plowing under things. But it now appears that his plow struck something yellow and exceedingly beautiful. Anyway, the newspapers have discovered that thar's gold in them thar fields. Publishers are inviting national advertisers to come out and get some of the money through the use of space in the papers that farmers read.

Farmers Have Cash for Needed Supplies

"Farm Comeback Over Whole Nation Now Opening Up Vast, Rich Markets," is the pleasant headline that graces the front page of Editor & Publisher, national newspaper guide, in a supplement devoted to John, his tall corn, fat hogs, lowing kine and pocketbook. ". . . the present fact is that the farm population, comprising one-third of the whole, is now prepared to spend money for urgently needed supplies. 'This is good news for sellers and advertisers of commodities,' observes the editor.

Although Mr. Hearst is personally shrieking to high heaven against the New Deal, a writer on his Omaha paper, the Bee-News, happily informs us that, aided by $40,000,000 corn-hog AAA reduction fees, "a golden stream of buying power" is blessing John in Nebraska. "New automobiles and trucks flash along the highways," he reports. "Farm machinery sales have advanced and all products have wider and surer markets."

And while the Chicago Tribune's editorial columns burn with indignation against "Corn" Wallace and all his works, Frank Ridgway, farm editor of that journal, contributes an article headed with the information that dollars are rolling along rural Illinois roads.

To Iowa's Farmers — a Half Billion

Here's news, too, that may or may not chirk up Sen. Dickenson, Iowa's No. 1 old dealer. Anyway, it should remind him of the good old days that he's been yearning for. "Iowa," reports J. S. Russell, farm editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune," sees a half billion dollars in farm income, the biggest since 1930. . . . In the production of new agricultural wealth today, Iowa farmers lead other states with an average of approximately $40,000,000 monthly in farm income during the first half of 1935."

So it goes. From all over the broad, fat land the story of John's gold strike is repeated: "Farmers of Indiana using black ink; gain $100,000,000." . . . "Implement dealers and manufacturers report nearly 100 per cent increase in business." . . . "Northwest farmer has chin up —Agriculture staging a tremendous comeback this year. Trade revival in full swing."

"Kentucky merchants jubilant as farmers harvest good crops." . . . "Southwest in spirited recovery. Live stock now selling at a profit—stockmen making more money than ever before during like period." . . . "Gross Wisconsin farm income this year will top $500,000,000 for the first time in five years." . . . "Millions in new wealth pour into North Dakota farmers' pockets." . . . "South Dakota crop comeback puts farmers in market for goods." . . . "Sale of 1935 crop will start river of wealth flowing." . . . "Michigan harvesting better than average fruit crop . . ." So much for John.

Now let's turn to the happiest story of all. The one about Herbert Hoover. It appears that while Mr. Hoover is publicly and politically viewing with alarm, privately he is getting in on the New Deal's prosperity ground floor. According to John E. Pickett, editor of the Pickett Rural Press, Mr. Hoover and his son, Allan, are among the largest investors in farm land.

"The smart money men feel," Pickett says, "that farm land is the soundest investment of all, and they are encouraged by the fact that agriculture has made the best recovery of any major industry and has a cheerful outlook ahead."

So it seems that things are looking up for Joe and John and Herb. Joe has a job making implements for John. John is on clover. Herb is getting in on the "smart money." We're all happy. What could be nicer?

About This And That
In Many Sports

EITHER CAN WIN

Take your choice, the Louis-Baer fight tonight has the boys guessing; not so many of them, however, since most are on Louis but the fight's going to be a honey anyway you take it. It will be knock-down-drag-out with both boys capable of giving it and at least one able to give it — Baer though losing the title to Braddock, has never been knocked off his feet — Louis has never been forced to go that far, usually brushing off his opponent before he could land a telling blow ***

HARLEM VS. GHETTO

CARDS FACE WALL

The Cardinal-Cub series will be premature world's series with Detroit sitting back and laughing

No matter who wins the 5-game series is going to take some sap from somebody and Detroit won't be a bit angry about it — By losing Monday, 9-12, to the Pirates, the Cardinals must win every game of the Chicago series to carry off the National league gonfalon, a seeming impossibility with the Cubs going as they now are — By losing to Pittsburgh, St. Louis dropped 3 1-2 games back of the Greenmen — If the Cards should lose again today they will trail four games since Chicago is not playing — That means all five games must be won — Should they win today and cut the edge to three games, they still need them all, because to win four and lose one would leave the title race in a tie ***

DEANS AND HALLAHAN

It looks to us like the Cardinal mound choices will be J. Dean, P. Dean, Hallahan, J. Dean and P. Dean in the five games while the Cubs will hurl Warnecke, Lee and Root and with those three Charlie hopes to clinch the title ***

VALENTINE HAS WINNER

Charlie Valentine, veteran race driver who first saw the light of day in Circleville, has developed another winner on the enclosed track. It is Calumet Fortuna. This filly won the Ohio colt racing association stake for three-year-old trotters at both the Marysville and Sidney fairs. She was the class of the field in both events and is considered a most promising racing prospect for next year. The jinx started on Valentine's trail in the preparation of his horses during the spring at Lexington. Bonnycastle, rated by many experts as the outstanding aged pacer, was the first to go wrong. Then his fast trotter, David Thornton, met with an injury which put him temporarily on the shelf. After returning to form, David Thornton threw a spike in his foot and was consequently retired for the year. The Republican mulatto pacer, Sid Finery, after training in 2:07 over the Columbus half-mile oval, disappointed in the rich Classic and also in the Governor's Cup event at the state fair, and Charley decided to hold him over until 1936.

TIGERS START DRILLING FOR HOLY ROSARY

Long Workout Held Monday evening; Reger Books Three New Officials

Circleville high school football followers will get to see three new officials perform in Friday's game against Holy Rosary on the local grid. The game starts at 3 o'clock.

Faculty Manager Elmer Reger announced today that Herschel K. Pope of Wellston, Ohio U. grad, will referee; Carlisle O. Dollings, Columbus, Ohio N. grad, will umpire, and Robert Terhune, Ohio State grad now principal and coach at Jackson-twp, will be headlinesman.

Pope and Dollings are both former Ohio university athletes and both are No. 1 as officials. Terhune, coming here from Fayetteville, has already made many friends.

Long Drills Held

Coach Jack Landrum started giving his boys the "woiks" Monday evening in preparation for the Holy Rosary encounter. Every athlete on the field knows his work is cut out for him this week-end since the Columbus Irish crew defeated Hillsboro last week, 7-0, and has not lost a ball game in two years.

'Twould be a real feather in the caps of the local crew if they could turn the trick on the invaders.

Nearly all the boys reported in good shape Monday and went through a long workout. It was about 6:30 before the dressing room order was heard. Every boy on the field is willing to work and all want to make the best showing possible against the highly-touted Rosary crew.

Even Larger Crowd

Indications are that Friday's crowd will be larger than that of last week when the Tigers won their first game in three years, 6-0, from Groveport.

The Central Buckeye caglue season opens the following week with Jim Scott's Grandview crew coming here.

SYRACUSE WINS HONORS IN INT

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 24 — The Syracuse Chiefs today had defeated the Montreal Royals, this year's pennant winners, in the International league final playoffs for the Governor's cup at a $16,000 purse.

The season's second-place club, which won 16 of its last 19 starts, triumphed over the Royals, 2 to 1, in the seventh and deciding game of the series behind the four hit pitching of George (Lefty) Hockett.

Try, Try, Again Schwartz Motto

Ed Schwartz, Chillicothe restaurant sandwich shop proprietor, offers a good fish story and kept the evidence to prove his case to skeptics.

While fishing in Paint creek Schwartz got a strike and the fish took his line. A short time later he had another strike and landed a nice bass. Out of its mouth protruded two lines. It was the same fish that had previously broken his line.

Schwartz saved the head, hooks and line to display in his fish market.

These Are Tough Days for Football Coach— He Must Weigh Tonnage Against Mileage

By Harry KIPKE
Football Coach, University of Michigan

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 24 — Coaches these days are spending just about as much time in a brown study — a state of mind and not part of a residence — as they are in directing practice on the drill grounds. Selection of players is the big problem. The training grind is now well along and the time is approaching when starting lineups will have to be picked.

Imagine a coach with three aspiring young centers, for instance, One weighs 240 pounds, another around 191, and the third is about five pounds under the middle man. The answer would seem to be the 240-pounder. That's a pretty good tonnage to anchor a line around.

But what if that big fellow isn't very shifty; has difficulty in getting from one place to the next with satisfying celerity, and hasn't yet learned how to use that accumulation of pounds to the best advantage against the avoirdupois opposite him? The next fellow is 50 pounds lighter, but the absence of those 50 enables him to "move out of there." Is the speed more important than the weight?

Center has to Step Around

Yes, it certainly is, particularly in that style of defense which brings the center out of the line to back up the forwards. In that post, he must be able to move quickly to the point of attack and must be able to drift back or to the side to cover the flat zones in meeting a forward pass offensive. When his own team is attacking, his job is by no means ended when he has passed the ball.

The big men, with his bulk, can hold the opposing linemen in check until the attack is under way. But after that the center has to break through and move fast to help mow down the defending secondary. And there is no law in this game of football to prevent a center tackling under punts. A lot of them have done it. The hefty fellow has trouble and a lot of it, in getting down the field.

And right there in that matter of tackling under punts, the above mentioned coach in his "brown study" is worrying about his tackles. Shall he pick beef or speed all other things being equal? He must have at least one tackle who can go down to make the kill under punts. The whole burden cannot be thrown on the ends.

A fleet tackle will make the majority of the kills under punts if his ends turn the punt receiver into his arms. In the majority of punt combinations it is the left tackle who bears this burden, but again there is no man-made law which prevents the fellow playing on the other side of the line from getting in the glory wagon.

A massive tackle, even if he isn't particularity fast, has a lot in his favor. It's hard to push him out of the way, and if he manages to charge into the opposing backfield he's messy to have around. Just about the best kind of a tackle to have on your team, though, is the fellow who is always doing the unexpected, the man who plays in one place for one minute, and is somewhere else the next. The big, slow man can't do that; he has to set himself in the most inconvenient place for the opposition and then do what he can from there.

Tonnage vs. Mileage

But this problem of tonnage versus miles per hour becomes more acute when the guards are discussed. In the olden days the biggest, fattest fat man in school could fit into almost any coach's delight. On the defense even today bulk is important.

"Grab legs" is often the instruction given to the guards when the other team has the ball. A 220-pounder, anchored in the middle of that line alongside a teammate with the same physical attributes, makes it pretty tough going for any attack.

But it is something else again on offense. The guards have to move fast rapidly. It can almost be said that they have to be faster than your blocking halfback. The blocking guard has to leave his place in the line, race around to the point of attack and team up there with said back in bowling over possible tacklers.

Just about the same considerations apply to the ends. The coach who possesses a 200-pounder who can move from point to point is a lucky individual indeed. If those 200 pounds are distributed over about six feet, two inches of stature—there is an All-American in the making.

But what if that couple of hundredweigh of end can't move about? Well, he can do a lot of things well. He can muss up the advance guard of an attack; he can smother the flank of a defensive line; he can probably stop a few forward passes into the flat zone near him, and he may reach high enough to snag a forward pass now and then. His weight will probably stand him in good stead in bearing up under the pounding an end invariably receives.

But there his efficiency stops. He would be just about helpless in breaking up a complicated lateral pass attack which has to be watched, which can't be broken up by a burly smash at some one of its joints, but which must be stalked to its final leg before the "kill."

Is Kipke in "Brown Study"?

An end has to do just about as much running as the back. If his team's attack includes a lot of forward passes he will find himself chasing down the field at top speed time after time. And top speed means top speed, for if those catchers can just outhoof the defensive there is nothing on earth -- save a broken arm or a decrepit tosser — can stop touchdowns. Speed is imperative in getting down under punts. What's the use of sky-rocketing those spirals 60 yards down the field if the catcher is going to race 30 yards before he meets a tackler?

You might think it unusual for a coach to be worrying about too much weight in the line. But maybe you have been reading a few news stories lately and have noticed that there is a coach in Ann Arbor, Mich., whose line averages 214 pounds or more per man. If you have read that far you also have noted that he has been turning track coach lately, trying to get some zip into the legs that trundle that tonnage around.

Joe Louis' Intended Says Wedding to Precede Bout

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — Approximately four hours before he answers the bell for his battle with Max Baer at the Yankee stadium, Joe Louis, the brown bomber of Detroit, will answer the bell for a vastly more important engagement.

At 6 o'clock, unless there's a last minute change in plans announced by the bride herself, Joe will hear the chiming of wedding bells.

Marva Trotter, the pretty ex-stenographer from Chicago, said this morning that she and Joe would become man and wife before the fight.

The ceremony, she revealed, will take place at the home of friends in the Bronx. The Rev. Walter Trotter, brother of the bride-to-be, will officiate; their sister, Novella, will be bridesmaid, and John Roxborough, the boxer's manager, probably will act as best man.

HANDLERS DIFFER

The comely girl's confidence the wedding would precede the stadium fisticuffs found no corroboration among Joe's handlers, however they declared

"There'll be no wedding until after the fight. We gotta keep our boy calm."

And they were so busy keeping Joe calm that Joe himself didn't get a chance to verify his fiance's announcement.

The bride-to-be did succeed in talking with her boy friend by phone, however, and she's certain there'll be no hitch in the plans for the nuptials.

In fact she's much more excited over the wedding than over the big fight. She has abandoned her plan to wear "just a suit" because

"A girl gets married only once, and I want to wear white."

Therefore she will adorn herself in an ermine trimmed white velvet gown.

"I'm interested in making a home for Joe," she declared. "I can cook if I have to, although I haven't had much experience. But I make all my own clothes and I like to sew."

BOTH FIGHTERS ARE CONFIDENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — There's no doubt in the minds of either Max Baer or Joe Louis as to which of them is going to win tonight. Here's what they say about it this morning:

By Max Baer

"Joe Louis is in for the hardest fight in his career. I honestly believe I will knock him out. I am in perfect condition and hitting as hard as I ever did. I am going out to score a knockout in quick time, and if Louis nails me he is going to find that at last he has come across a fighter who can take it."

By Joe Louis

"I don't think I'll need more than six or seven rounds — ten at the outside. If Baer comes out punching the way he says he will, maybe I'll get him in a hurry. I only hope he lives up to what he says about comin' to me. If he plays safe, and doesn't take chances, it will take me longer."

RECORDS DISCLOSE ABILITY OF PAIR

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — Old man "past performances" tells his own story about California Max Baer and Detroit Joe Louis, who tangle at the Yankee stadium here tonight.

In six years of professional fighting, Baer fought 50 ring battles. He won 31 of these by knockouts, ten by decisions, enough to carry him to the heavyweight championship. Max lost eight bouts, and one was a no-decision contest.

Joe Louis, in 14 months of professional glove-tossing has had 21 bouts, and won all of them. Twenty were by the K. O. route. As an amateur Joe fought 52 times, and won the national A. A. U. 175-pound title at St. Louis in 1934.

STATE LEASES RUGGLES LAND FOR PRESERVE

Francis Announces 1,600 Acres in Pickaway-Twp to Be Barred to Hunters

Clarence Francis, Pickaway-co game protector, announced Tuesday that the 1,600-acre Ruggles estate property in Pickaway-twp has been leased to the state conservation department for a game preserve.

Of the 1,600 acres, more than 150 acres are wooded.

As a result of the action the entire property will be barred to hunters either with dogs or guns. The land will be well-posted, Mr. Francis reported.

A large number of pheasants have already been placed on the land and other game will be delivered there shortly, the game protector said.

The refuge will stock the entire township within a short time.

NON-TITLE FIGHT TO MAKE HISTORY; GOTHAM EXCITED

Jacobs is Prepared to Start Fight Early in Case of Rain; Baer's Performance Against Braddock Gives Louis Favorite's Spot.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 — Go back to Reno and twenty-five years ago, the day when Jeffries and Johnson caught and held the headlines. It isn't enough. Twenty-five years are no measure of this tremendous thing that is about to happen. Make it generations, centuries, ions: Go back practically to the beginning of time and even then you'll find something innate, instinctive and older than civilization itself.

You'll find it again at the Yankee stadium tonight when Max Baer and Joe Louis are to do violence in an inter-racial prize fight, while a record crowd of more than 100,000 contrive to make a pagan holiday of the kind that caused Nero to fiddle and Rome to burn. There is no championship at stake tonight, only the inborn feelings of the ages.

20 Knocked Out

All Harlem is alive and ready to revel in the celebration it feels is ordained for this negro heavyweight whose face is so blank and whose punch is so terrible. Twenty of the twenty-four white men he has faced in a little more than a year of professional fighting have been knocked out. His fame, in fact, has spread like a peculiar contagion that draws all men within its sinister scope, the result being the first million-dollar gate of the horizontal era and the sixth in history.

This morning, hotel public rooms looked like dormitories with strangers sleeping side by side. Tonight, the stadium will seat 92,650, with the end hardly yet. They'll stand in the rear, they'll cling to pillars and supports. They'll do anything, pay anything to get inside. Nothing like it has ever happened before. Nothing like it may ever happen again.

In one corner will be the white man, Baer, good enough to win the heavyweight championship but not sensible enough to keep it. In the other, the solemn-faced negro, Louis, who may yet be great enough to take it. Baer, with the body of a God and the mind of a mountebank lost the title in apparent jest a few months ago and now in anger would attempt to take it back. He's a strange mixture of greatness and puerility, a tremendous hitter with his right hand—when the spirit wills it.

Louis 2 to 1 Bet

But Louis hits tremendously with both and is at least 2 to 1 in the betting, with millions likely to change ownership on the result. Those same millions have quoted him at a record "low" of 8 to 5 by a knockout inside the fifteen-round distance. A singular story, this colored boy from the Detroit auto plants who drinks and smokes not, neither does he smile. He's only 21 and he's to be married tonight some time after the fight, some say before.

Oh, yes; this is a slightly insane situation but so far everything has proceeded with comforting results. Even the weather was favorable this morning, although Promoter Mike Jacobs was prepared, in the event of threatening clouds, to put the big fight on early, regardless of the broadcast, scheduled to begin at ten o'clock, eastern daylight time.

The promoter, in a word, was taking no chances with a gate that figures to do $1,200,000 or better, breaking the non-championship record held by Dempsey and Sharkey. It also was a record for fights held at $25 "tops" to say nothing of the fact that it furnished the fourth biggest gate in history. Morever, it seemed significant that it was the first fight to beat a million dollars without Jack Dempsey as one of the principals.

Dempsey Uncertain

Dempsey was scheduled to be in Baer's corner but last night was mumbling something that sounded like a desire to take an "out." He indicated his displeasure about stories that linked him with a rumored desire by Baer to "play rough" tonight in the hope of stealing the show. Considering the nature of the assemblage, such a course might be reprehensible in the extreme.

Meanwhile, the gentleman himself has given no indication of his intentions. He arrived at the Grand central looking a little grumpy after his ride from the training camp but otherwise seeming in excellent condition. He should be.

For this gift to the night clubs has lived the life of a recluse and an ascetic at the Speculator, N. Y., camp. He has trained so earnestly as to cause some to believe that his confinement will have a bad psychological effect upon one so ebullient. Still, the assumption is general that, if he can't win in the condition he's in, there will be nothing for it but to admit that he hasn't got it in him.

The only questions remaining had to do with his right hand, which Pete Reilly, the fight manager, claimed had been injured last week. Perhaps this claim had something to do with the sudden "lift" in Louis stock from 8-5 to 2-1 beyond, for Mr. Reilly, who likes to bet them, is not wholly without guile.

Actually the 2-1 would seem justified, off Baer's last fight with James J. Braddock and the impressive record of Louis. Baer looked like the worst fighter in the world against Braddock. Louis has looked the part of the best in knocking out Primo Carnera and King Levinsky.

There have been those who ask, "Can Louis take it?" and well they might, for the colored boy hasn't had to. It is on the off chance that Baer might score with one of those thundering rights that price-makers have made him 4-1 to win by a knockout, but, as others sensibly point out, if he couldn't hit Braddock, how is he going to hit Louis?

That's something that will have to wait for evening and the greatest and most dramatic crowd ever assembled for anything in New York city. The first Tunney-Dempsey fight beat it easily with 120,000 people; the second may yet do so. But this time at least twenty thousand will be left outside the field when they lock the crowd in tonight.

CARDS STILL HAVE CHANCE

Must Win From Now On To Win National League Title; Benten By Pirates

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24— With mathamatics proving they still have a chance to repeat as National league champions but calm reasoning indicating the race is all over, the punch-drunk world champion Cardinals today faced a crisis that the famed Cardinal fighting spirit seemed inadequate to cope with.

Reeling from the terrific 12 to 0, 16-hit whipping the Pirates administered to them yesterday, the Cardinals in order to win the pennant were faced with the grim necessity of sweeping all five of their games with the berzerk Cubs here later in the week should they lose today's game with Pittsburgh. If the Cardinals should by some feat of legerdemain produce a fresh pitcher from its tired and jittery staff and capture today's game they still would be faced with the herculean task of winning four out of five from the Cubs in the "little world series" here even to tie for the league lead.

But with mathematics making it impossible, for the Cardinals, no matter how terrible their pitching may be, to lose the pennant until the Cubs come here tomorrow fresh from a two day rest, the "little world series" still appeared ready to set new attendance records at the Cardinals Sportsman's park home.

DRUMMOND WINS GOLFING HONORS

CHILLICOTHE, Sept. 24—Russell "Ikey" Drummond, ex-caddy, won the Chillicothe Country club golf championship Sunday from Curtis "Dutch" Reed, 5 up and 4 to go in a 36-hole match.

Drummond turned in a pair of 35s for the first 18 holes to be four under par. He negotiated the next nine in 37.

Spencer Dixon, another ex-caddy, won the title a year ago.

Reed back in July won the National Elks' golf title at the Columbus convention. The valuable Doyle trophy won in this classic reposes on the bar in the Chillicothe Elks lodge. Reed plans to go to Los Angeles next summer to defend his title in the convention.

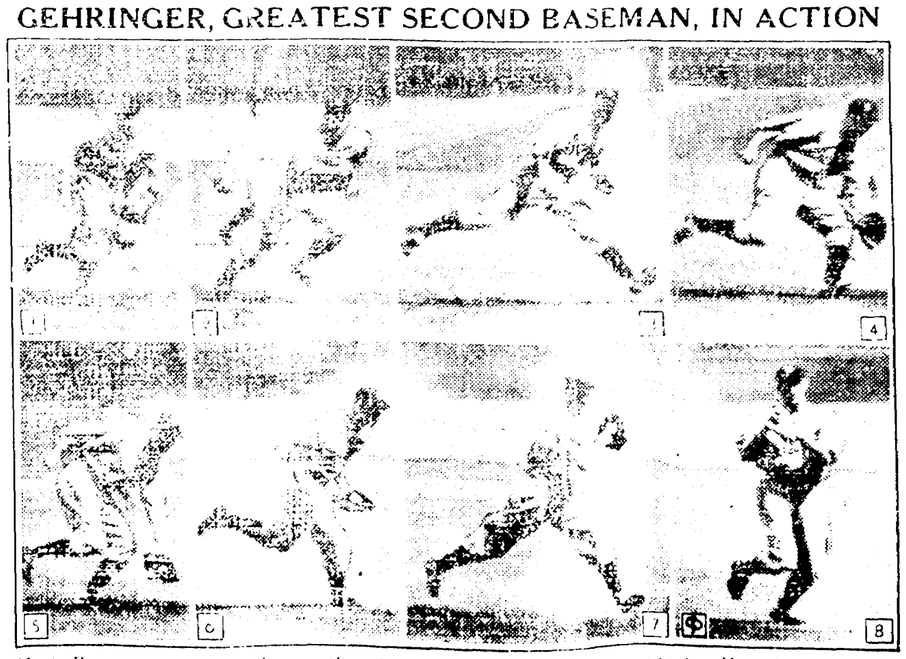
GEHRINGER, GREATEST SECOND BASEMAN, IN ACTION



Magic Eye camera captures the smooth and graceful action of Charley Gehringer, second baseman of the pennant-winning Detroit Tigers, as he dashes to his left to scoop up a potential two-base hit and convert it into a putout. Note how perfectly Gehringer, who is called the "greatest since Lajoie" times his catch and continues in an unbroken motion to throw to first.

REPORT LISTS PENSION PLAN FOR COUNTIES

Sherrill Says New Pension Laws Should Be Put in Effect Through State

COLUMBUS, Sept. 24 Following up recommendations for reorganizing the state division of aid for the aged to save $2,400,000 annually, the Ohio Government Survey committee today laid before Gov. Martin L. Davey a complete program for turning back to counties duties of pension administration.

Bitter in its condemnation of the method used in employing employes of the division, the committee charged that the department has transgressed civil service statutes. The survey report urged discharge of all employes now on the staff and employment strict civil service, as soon as new pension laws could be put into

Personel Incompetent

"Personnel responsible for administering Aid for the Aged in Ohio from the top down, with a few exceptions, is incompetent for this work and is responsible for a wastage of public funds running into millions," Col. C. O. Sherrill, former Cincinnati city manager, chairman of the committee, contended.

The survey committee recommended that a new law be drafted making the pension division one section of a state division of 'public assistance' in the state welfare department.

The group would concentrate in this division all forms of state-administered relief.

Decentralization of administrative authority, which has plunged Henry J. Derrodin, Akron, chief of the pension branch, into bitter controversy with county boards, is also urged by the committee.

Returned to County

The report, based on an exhaustive study of the operation of the year-old pension system, suggests that administration authority be lodged in county departments of welfare.

The proposed new legislation would require every county to set up welfare departments to administer all forms of relief as well as pensions.

"Membership of these boards would be local citizens, unpaid, non-partisan and responsible for co-ordination of the various types of relief, safeguarding it from politics, waste and inefficiency," the committee declared.

The survey also recommended that recipients of pensions be no longer required to transfer their property to the state and urges a $30 maximum monthly pension instead of $25, likewise urging that provision be made for medical care.

Strict conformance to federal provisions for pensions under the social security act is also stressed.

Ross On New Canal

Col. Brehon Somervell

After President Roosevelt had touched a telegraph key in Washington, setting off the dynamite blast at Ocala Fla., that started the $146,000,000 Gulf-Atlantic canal project, Col. Brehon Somervell, in charge of construction of the waterway, is pictured addressing the crowd. The 200-mile waterway will require six years to complete.

The Romance Racket

By MARIE BLIZARD

READ THIS FIRST:

On her twenty-fourth birthday Carol Kennedy, coming into a vast fortune, suddenly announces to her relatives that she is giving up her old home in Connecticut, where she has lived as an orphan, to move to New York to find happiness and freedom. Among those attending Carol's birthday party are her cousin, Kathy Prentice, and her fiance, Dr. Owen Craig, whom she is marrying for social prestige. Unattractive Carol, who knows nothing of parties, pretty clothes and beaux, secretly admires Owen. Carol astounds her old nurse when she tells her of her plan. In New York Carol looks up Isobel Bronson, an old school chum now in the real estate business, to obtain help in finding an apartment. Isobel suggests a cocktail party and eagerly helps Carol purchase proper clothes for the occasion. Carol tastes her first cocktail and meets Gary Crandall, attractive playboy, who shows an interest in her. He suggests they leave the party. Without disclosing her wealth, Carol enlists Gary's aid in helping to find a job and he also promises to show her how she can become a fascinating woman.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

"These will do nicely."

CHAPTER 7

CAROL KENNEDY felt that she had stepped into a world peopled with strange and wonderful things. She who had been so unaware of happiness and gaiety and youth had suddenly come alive.

It was as though she had slept through those years of learning and travel. The sights and sounds of familiar and strange places alike had sufficed so long as the inner girl had not been touched.

What had happened to Carol that suddenly she wanted parties and pretty clothes? She had never cared about those things before. Her plainness had never meant anything to her until now.

And now a man she had met less than an hour before could stir her to the depths of her being with desperate hope because he said that he knew the way to make her fascinating.

Gary's face blurred before her vision and when finally she found words, she said, "I don't know what you mean."

"What do you think I mean?" he parried. What could this drab little girl think he meant? Memories of beautiful women touched his lips with a smile. No, his interest in Carol wasn't a romantic one.

Carol felt lost. She didn't know much about men but she had heard of the wolf in sheep's clothing and why should Gary do anything for her? And besides, how could she ever hope to cope with any sophisticated situation? It may be a wonderful new world she had ventured into but it was too strange for her. How could she get anywhere in a world where you met a man at five o'clock and at six he asked you to put yourself in his hands so to speak. She'd put on her coat this minute. Instead she said:

"Can you . . . can you really do something for me?"

"I can, but not if you're going to be sensitive because I'm going to be brutal. I'm going to tell you truths. Let me look at your hands."

Obediently she laid her hands in his.

"These will do nicely," he said, spreading her fingers out and touching the nails. "We'll paint them red."

"Oh, no," she protested.

"Think it's vulgar?" he questioned.

"Yes," she answered.

"I see where I shall have to start further back than I thought, Carol. Let me set you right. You stiffened at the idea of painting your fingernails red. Look here, your hands are lovely, slim and tapering. They were made to be decorative and noticed. Bright red at the fingertips will bring out their fragile whiteness. . . . Are you beginning to see?"

Carol nodded; she was beginning to see.

"You have—I think—a good figure but it is difficult to judge with those unshapely clothes you're wearing."

Oh, dear, Carol thought, I figured the sweater and hat would save me and this suit did cost $200.

"You don't understand what I mean, do you?" he asked her gently.

"I'm afraid I don't but I'd like to."

"Well, let me explain. You have, I presume, a waistline, but looking at you I have no idea where."

A flush rose in her cheek.

"Don't be stuffy, Carol. Look at the whole thing impersonally and you won't be embarrassed.

"Shall I regard you as a big brother?" she asked timidly.

"For goodness' sake, don't! You regard me as . . . Well, we'll talk about that later.

"Let's get back to you. You weigh about 110 and you're tall so that means your figure should be good. Small bones. Good carriage. Nice skin. Dull now but makeup will take care of that."

Carol had an absurd impulse to tell him that her teeth were in good condition but she kept her silence in utter fascinations at his words.

"You'll want clever clothes. Things that cling I imagine."

"Oh," she said eagerly, "I have a very good dressmaker."

"I'm afraid you're not a walking advertisement of her arts."

"I'm going to buy a new lipstick (she didn't say her first) tonight and . . ."

"Oh, please don't do that, at least not yet. We begin with your hair"—he studied her—"I don't know whether we should have it cut or not."

Her hand went protectingly to the heavy knot at the back of her head. He did not notice.

"No, I think it should be thinned out, a yard cut off and a soft arrangement at the back. Yes, that would be queenly."

Queenly. Carol's ears began to burn. Fascinating. That such words might ever describe her she had never dreamed.

"How would you like an auburn shade?"

Lost in her own thoughts, Carol did not get the meaning of his question at once. Then:

"Dye my hair, do you mean!"

"My dear, please don't use such an unpleasant word. You must learn to take a pleasant attitude about all things and to term them in their proper words. Suppose we say 'shade'—yes, 'shade' is the word—your hair to a more becoming hue to give it luster and beauty."

"But I . . . I . . ."

"No more objections. Tomorrow we'll have a lark. You meet me here for lunch at one and call off your job-hunting in the afternoon and I'll take you to a beauty shop. It will be fun for both of us. . . . And look here—" Gary had the grace to look embarrassed. After all, poor kid maybe she didn't have any money. "let me pay for it and you can give it back to me when you marry a millionaire."

Study Italy's Attitude

The communique stated, however, that Il Duce "examined the possibilities of developments of the question on the basis of the articles of the league government, and the attitude which Italy will adopt, according to circumstances."

Despite the caution reflected here, Il Duce continued his preparations for war. The cabinet passed a decree under which all males between the ages of 21 and 34 who previously had been declared medically unfit for army service must undergo a new and more thorough examination. This followed closely creation of a $243,000,000 war fund.

The cabinet also approved decrees providing volunteers up to the age of 55 would be accepted for duty in East Africa, raising the previous limit of 32, and decreed that soldiers at war in East Africa may be married by proxy.

BEDLAM RULES

The streets and pool halls were alive at an early hour at which time some anxious glances were directed toward the weather which remained clear but somewhat chilly. There was no sign of disorder.

Downtown before fight headquarters the mad, merry scramble for tickets persisted, especially with special trains and busses bringing new customers from distant cities. In the face of this last minute rush, Promoter Mike Jacobs let it be known that he had some 5,000 additional tickets to dispose of. But a check with his box office men revealed that these were for standees.

New York, in other words, had never before seen such a crowd. It may run as high as 105,000 before the end is reached, thus displacing the Tunney-Dempsey fight at Chicago as the second greatest in point of attendance. The top in this direction was their Philadelphia fight, which packed in more than 120,000.

Louis went through light exercises at Pompton Lakes and left for the weighing in around 10:30, with a police escort.

Meanwhile, $100 was being considered a plausible price for tickets within the first fifteen rows. As for the general admissions, they were supposed to go on sale today but the promoter yielded to the clamor yesterday and was wiped out of these in less than an hour.

200 DISCUSSING COAL MINE STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24— The second day of the national strike of union bituminous coal miners today saw the industry's main activity being performed by 100 operators and 100 miners—none of whom dig coal.

These representatives of the industry were hard at work here in a hotel room trying to reach an agreement on a working contract which when approved, will sound off the whistles at the mines in 28 states and see 400,000 miners scurry back to the jobs they ignored Monday morning when their many-times-extended working contract expired.

Both sides have made concessions in the long deliberations, which started eight months ago and today the remaining obstacle to an agreement was over a piecework pay scale per-ton with the stand-pat demands of the operators and of the union being just one and one-half pennies apart.

Election Protested

General Emilio Aguinaldo

Leaders of General Emilio Aguinaldo's National Socialist party, which was defeated in the recent Filipino elections, cabled President Roosevelt a protest against the conduct of the balloting for the first president of the commonwealth republic. They charged frauds had occurred, that officeholders and constabulary had intimidated voters, and accused Governor Frank Murphy of partiality. Manuel Quezon was elected in the face of the returns.
